The Oregon Trail Relived at Eugene

Eugene, June 31.—All the gay color, vivid excitement, and stirring drama of the great pioneer West is being relived in a twentieth century atmosphere as the citizens of Lane county adopt the colorful clothes and quaint customs of our forefathers in preparation for the fourth Oregon Trail pageant celebration to be held in Eugene on July 22, 23 and 24.

Beards flourish, men have donned picturesque pioneer costumes—beaver hats, boots, red shirts; women are wearing calico gowns and bonnets, as the whole community lives again the exciting days of 1843.

The entire state is "chaining up" with the spirit of the Oregon pioneer in an effort to make the pageant attract world-wide attention. Evidence that it is already internationally famous was revealed in a letter to pageant headquarters from Roland G. Wild, who stated that he will cover the celebration for The People, Odhams Press, of London, England—a publication of over three million circulation.

Plans are now under way for the selection of Queen Susannah IV, who will rule over the pageant. The queen will be selected by the mayors of Lane county's cities at a celebration in Eugene on July 10.

Entries are being received from all parts of the state in the contest to choose a baby queen who will share regal duties at the celebration with Queen Susannah. Descendants of Oregon's early settlers in any part of the state, between the ages of five and seven years, are eligible for the contest.

Nearly every large city in Oregon will be visited within the next three weeks by a 20-man junior chamber of commerce drill team dressed in authentic pioneer garb and will receive a special invitation to participate in the state of Oregon's greatest epic of the West.

Chick Men Support All-Industry Progress

The close relationship between the prosperity of the commercial egg producer and the welfare of the hatcherymen was emphasized at the annual session of the Oregon Branch of the International Baby Chick association which held its summer session on the Oregon State college campus. It was decided to use every effort to cooperate with other poultry organizations to further the welfare of the entire industry.

A resolution was passed endorsing the efforts to bring the Pacific coast and northwestern states together on a program of regional poultry research which would qualify for assistance from the department of agriculture under the Jones-Bankhead act. Oregon delegates to the International Baby Chick convention in Baltimore plan to go to Washington to urge the granting of such research assistance.

The Oregon group also endorsed the move to have the poultry work in the department of agriculture centralized in a separate bureau.

Joe Russell of Corvallis was elected to succeed Lloyd Lee of Salem, who had served two years. Fred Cockell of Milwaukie and L. E. Cabe of McMinnville were re-elected vice-president and secretary respectively. Other directors chosen are U. G. Kirk, St. Paul; Ambrose Brownell, Milwaukie; Merle Moore and J. A. Hansen, Corvallis, and Lloyd Lee, Salem.

HOME GROUNDS SAFER

In 452 traffic accidents in which a person was killed (either driver, pedestrian or occupant of car), 283 of the drivers involved were away from their usual surroundings or home town, says the Oregon State Motor association, and of the accidents in which these 283 drivers were involved, 204 occurred at night.
