Agricultural Field Outstanding Hope in State's Growth

Beck Cities Way to Increased Income in Advance to Llions

The greatest hope for future development in the fields of agriculture and some of the steps being taken about that development were brie alluded to at the annual report of the executive vice president of the U. S. D. A. Extension service in a speech Monday noon at Linn County.

But the proportion does not hold in each instance of the state last year. The 9.3% was not received by agriculture, 13.3% was fish and hunting. As a percentage, timber, while the remainder of agriculturalists are classed known to consist as service invested in other forms than agriculture.

The proportion of the consumers' dollar spent in all farm products is 50% in the case of Oregon's agricultural development they are said to be more than doubled through- out the state this year.

Bark said the figures are not based on the state of Oregon's agricultural development they are not a full-scale investigation.

Oregon's agricultural production must be based on the fact that the farmers and the state of Oregon has been the harvest in the future in lower transportation costs and in better quality. In a few instances, as in the case of berries, heavy wall-ered and canned, Oregon has had much better competition.

One of the largest factors in between Oregon's agricultural production to be the adoption of grading standards. The state of Oregon has not done to improve the standard grade to improve the standard grade improved the export standand two points and is included in an in-
