Parades Afford Opportunity for All to Participate

Cash, Merchandise Prizes Offered for Variety of Entries

No more popular Rodeo feature has ever been staged than the big annual parade on Saturday, the final day. Each year this feature has grown, attracting more and more interest, partly through the offering of premiums, but more particularly through the pride and enthusiasm with which Morrow county people have supported it.

The last few years, Heppner merchants have helped create interest through the offering of cash and merchandise prizes, while Morrow county has encouraged interest in the building of large floats by offering a $25 grand sweepstakes. Chief contenders for the sweepstakes have been the organization floats, in which county granges have taken an outstanding interest. And with a $25 prize for the best organization float added to the $25 sweepstakes, good compensation has been received by the organization coming out on top.

Prizes are offered in the big parade for various types of entries, from the sublime to the ridiculous, with good prizes offered especially for the showing of horses and those things representative of the Old West.

This year for the first time, in addition to the big Saturday parade, there will be parades of Rodeo stock and performers to the grounds to start each afternoon's show with a grand entry.

Floyd Peters Holds Rodeo Roping Record

The best all-time calf-roping time at the Rodeo was hung up in 1933 by Floyd Peters who has also placed in the money several years at Pendleton. That record is 20 seconds flat.

Other good roping times turned in on various years included that of Jack Barber in 1924, of :24 2-3, Eddie Sheridan in 1925 and R. R. Ingersoll in 1928, both :27, and Tony Vey in 1924, of :30. These are times made in the contests. Vey lowered the contest record in exhibitions on occasion. His specialty exhibition has been the roping and tying of a calf without use of a bridle on his well trained horse.
