May They Come Again

HEPPNER was warmed by one of the largest crowds in Rodeo history last week end, and the warmth has left a glow of cheerful remembrance.

A fine spirit of fellowship was evidenced by the large number of people attending from Grant and Umatilla counties, and there was more than ordinary the number of old-time residents who returned to renew acquaintances.

All features of the show itself went off in good shape, reflecting credit upon the directors. To Henry C. Aiken, Dr. R. C. Lawrence, Harlan McCurdy, the executive committee; Len L. Gilliam, secretary-treasurer; Scott Furlong, Frank Swagart and Tony Vey, directors, goes much credit. Mrs. Alta Bown, who superintended the pioneers' picnic; Joseph Belanger, fair director, and E. R. Schaffer, carnival committee head, also worked tirelessly and successfully in their departments.

Mention may not be made of all who are entitled to credit. Frank C. Alfred and his crew of ticket sellers did a good job, as did Dr. Lawrence's helpers at the dances. The work of the judges and other officials at the grounds was deeply appreciated.

In her work, Mrs. Brown announces that she received the ready cooperation of everyone for which she is deeply grateful. She has expressed appreciation for the help received from those who took part on the program and all others who helped to make the pioneer's picnic a success. The demand shown on every hand that this feature be continued is evidence of the public appreciation.

There is no little pride in feeling that Heppner measured up well in entertaining the large crowd, in receiving the many kind words that were spoken on parting. Such a spirit warms the cockles of the heart, and adds to the anticipation of the next Rodeo.

Farewell Tribute Given Capt. Reynolds

Members of Camp Heppner, CCC, twice feted Capt. W. R. Reynolds, retiring camp commandant, this week before he left yesterday for Moro to assume a like position with the CCC camp there.

Yesterday morning Captain and Mrs. Reynolds and Patsy Ann were treated to a surprise breakfast at the camp, and tendered gifts of remembrance. Sunday, a surprise dinner in their honor was given at the camp, with the cooks doing their job to a turn. Captain Reynolds has been head of the local camp since its inception three years ago, and the parting tribute is evidence of the widespread esteem and affection which he holds among those with whom he worked.

NEW SCHOOL LAW OUT

New copies of the 1937 school laws have just been received at the office of Mrs. Lucy E. Rodgers, county school superintendent, who announces that two copies will be sent to each rural district, and three copies to each village district in the county. One copy will be in the hands of each district clerk, one in the hands of each district board chairman, and one placed on file in the village schools. Those on file may be borrowed by anyone desiring to consult it, the same as library books.

More Rooms Ready for OSC Co-eds This Fall

Corvallis—Additional facilities for housing women students at Oregon State college this fall have been made to care for an expected increase in registration. Adequate and comfortable housing is now assured for all, says Dr. Kate W. Jamson, dean of women. Four large residences near the campus have been rented and furnished as dormitory annexes, while three large co-operative houses will again be used for girls who share work and expenses among a group.

Advance applications for admission indicate that the opening of Freshman week, September 20, will find a somewhat larger freshman group than last year's record class while the moving up of larger classes will doubtless mean more old students returning for regular registration September 25, say college officials.

Strange Leaf Hoppers Invade State Gardens

Corvallis—The little black hopping beetles that have invaded Oregon cabbage and kale fields this summer, laying some of them waste by chewing up the leaves, is a new species of leaf hopper observed first in this state about two years ago, say the entomologists at Oregon State college. Little is known of its life history, but the use of rotenone dust has been the most effective in its control.

This species, Phyletreta columbiana, or sometimes called the Canadian leaf hopper, appeared suddenly in great hordes, sometimes seriously injuring a patch of kale or cabbage in a few days. Later this species became less numerous and late in August another species, Phyletreta simplex, was doing some damage. Rotenone is the best protection found for any of the leaf hoppers, entomologists say.

AUXILIARY TO MEET

PIONEERS, MAYORS OF FOUR CITIES PARTICIPATE IN PROGRAM AT PICNIC

If general comment of those attending can be credited, no finer feature was presented at Rodeo time than the pioneer's picnic, staged on Thursday morning.

Mrs. Alta Brown, committee chairman, presented Judge Bert Johnson as master of ceremonies, who in turn presented the mayors of four cities and several pioneers, among them Mayor "Buck" Lieuallen of Pendleton who gave the address of welcome. Group singing of "Faith of Our Fathers" at the opening, two numbers by the trio, Misses Kathryn Parker, Juanita Phelps and Marie Barlow, accompanied by Miss Jeanette Turner, invocation by Alvin Kleinfeldt, and standing silent tribute to those pioneers who passed on the last year accompanied by trumpeting of "taps," all went to round out the enjoyable program.

Mayors, besides Mr. Lieuallen, each of whom spoke on pioneer experiences or impressions, included Bert Mason of Ione, Tom Barnett of Lexington and Jeff Jones of Heppner. Marion Evans and C. A. Minor were present on the platform, responding to introductions as earlier pioneers in the county. Mr. Minor responded with reminiscences of pioneer experiences, recalling that only seven houses were present on the then Stansbury flat when he first arrived in Heppner as a boy.

A few stood when those who were in the county before 1875 were asked to stand, and there were a few more who responded to the call for those who came before 1885.

Livestock Feature Fine Showing At County Fair

Frances Wilkinson,
Lex Sheep Club
Win Special Awards

By JOSEPH BELANGER

The Morrow County fair this year brought out the finest exhibition of livestock shown in this county since the heyday of the old county fair. In addition to an excellent showing of girls' club work in the 4-H club room at the county pavilion, 79 4-H club sheep and 19 cattle competed for prizes in the show ring. Harlan McCurdy brought in five Lindy Lane rams for exhibition and Frank Wilkinson exhibited three excellent Suffolk Hampshire crossbred bucks. Milo Huston exhibited a registered Belgian stallion of the Jupiter breeding made famous throughout the Belgian world by Harold, Belgian breeder from Washington. An unusual exhibit by Mike Roberts should not go unmentioned. His Irish setter bitch with her eleven hungry puppies were squirming, squealing evidences that a time of burdensome surpluses may again be upon us.

On Thursday, O. M. Nelson, professor of animal husbandry at OSC, spent the forenoon judging the sheep show which he declared to be much superior to that of last year in both numbers and quality.

Percy Folsom, manager of the J. E. Smythe Livestock company, from whom several 4-H club members purchased registered Delaine ewes in 1936, had just returned from his ram sale at Texas and was present at the show with Mrs. Folsom to watch the judging. The silver cup awarded by Mr. Folsom as a special trophy to the club member making the best showing of Delaine sheep was won this year by Frances Wilkinson. She placed third with her yearling ewe, second with her aged ewe, second with her ram lamb, fourth with a ewe fleece and first with a yearling fleece.

The Lions' club trophy which has been awarded each year for the last three years to the sheep club making the best all-round showing at the county fair, was won again this year, for the second time, by the Lexington Sheep club.

In the judging contest held Saturday morning before the parade, Lexington Sheep club was the winner with a club score of 765 out of a possible 900. Pine City Sheep club was second with 720, Lexington Calf club third with 660, and Willow Creek Sheep club fourth with 645.

There was keen interest in the showmanship contests which were judged by Leroy C. Wright, county
