Culling Pointers Given For Poultry Producers

Individual culling of the poultry flock is just about a year-round task, but there are definite seasons, usually in late spring and late summer, that flock culling is done to advantage, says H. E. Cosby, head of the poultry department at Oregon State college, in the latest extension bulletin, entitled, "Culling the Poultry Flock." This is a revision of previous bulletins on this subject and includes considerable additional information.

The bulletin discusses the comparative value of factors used to indicate profitable producers, such as vigor and health, yellow pigment, moult, body changes, head, and temperament. No one factor is a complete guide taken by itself, according to the bulletin, although vigor is the foundation of a successful poultry business. The bulletin describes a convenient method of catching hens either in groups or as individuals for examination.

PASSING CARS ON THE ROAD

When you pass a car that is going 40 miles an hour, it is just the same as passing at least 18 cars parked bumper to bumper in the road, reminds the Oregon State Motor association. Always wait until you can see the car you have just passed in the rear-view mirror before turning over to the right in front of it.

Preferred Heights for Chairs, Stools Found

Mrs. Average homemaker of Oregon and Washington prefers a 16-inch chair to sit in while doing long time jobs, such as the preparation of fruit for canning. The chair seat should be at least 14 inches in width.

For use at a sink six inches deep she likes a stool 29 inches high, with a footrest 14 inches from the floor.

These figures were obtained in a recent survey of some 500 women in Oregon and Washington, who made actual tests to determine exactly the best heights for these and other articles of home equipment. The study was conducted by Miss Maud Wilson, home economist at O. S. C., and Miss Evelyn H. Roberts of Washington State college.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kilkenny, Jr., attended the Rodeo from Pendleton.

HUGE LIVESTOCK ENTRIES FOR FAIR

Here's a sample of Oregon's pureblood cattle, hundreds of heads of which will help fill the livestock barns at the 70th Oregon state fair in Salem September 6 to 12. These cows are from the L. A. Hulbert registered Jersey herd at Independence. The group shows first senior get of sire at the fair in 1935 and 1936, all daughters of Sybil's Ashburn Baronet, a silver, gold and medal of merit bull shipped to Minnesota for $3,250 in 1935 and in themselves representing three world records. Below, Sybil Lad's Marjorie May, not yet two-year-olds but already more bag than cow and a world record prospect.
