

Barratt Goes East To Study Marketing End of Livestock

Three-Week Tour Set as Special Guest of Swift & Company

J. G. Barratt of this city, president Oregon Wool Growers association, will leave Pendleton by train tomorrow for a three-weeks' trip to eastern points. He will make a first-hand study of marketing and distribution in the livestock industry as a specially invited guest of Swift & Co.

Each year Swift & Co. invites some outstanding man in the livestock production industry of Oregon to make this tour as a vehicle toward better understanding between the different branches of the industry. Among those who have made the trip in the past are Walter Holt, secretary of the wool grower's association, and R. G. Johnson, formerly county agent of Grant county and now instructor in livestock at Oregon State college.

Mr. Barratt's first stop was slated to be in Chicago, where living reservations had been made by the company at the Parker House. A stop in Philadelphia, and a five-day stay in New York where he will be "put up" at the New Yorker, were also included.

A full day was scheduled each day of the trip, with "work" starting at 7 o'clock in the morning. A round-trip railroad ticket and all other expenses of the trip are being provided by the large packing concern.

This is the third year that Mr. Barratt has been invited to make the trip, but the first time he was able to arrange his business to accommodate the schedule in order to accept the invitation. A report of his findings is expected to be made at the forthcoming convention of the state wool growers some time in January.

Red Cross Packages Go for Xmas Cheer

The county's quota of six Red Cross gift kits were assembled and mailed this week to service men in distant parts to aid in spreading Christmas cheer. Civic and fraternal organizations contributed to make up the packages.

Contained in the cretonne-covered kits of uniform size are deck of cards, pocket diary, writing paper, pencil, handkerchief, wash cloth, tooth paste, shaving cream and pocket comb.

WHAT SHALL ENDURE?
Great roads the Romans built that men might meet,
And walls to keep strong men apart—secure.
Now centuries have gone, and in defeat
The walls are fallen, but the roads endure.

RAIN SHRINKS GRAIN
While rains the last week were welcome to livestock operators as beneficial to range conditions, harvesters were not so well pleased. Aside from causing costly lay-offs, another detriment was cited by E. W. Christopherson, in the city Saturday from the farm in the Ione section. Mr. Christopherson had finished his own harvest before the rain hit, reaping high quality turkey red wheat. However, his neighbor with exactly the same strain of wheat had not finished and his ripened grain was rained on. When the neighbor's grain was weighed in it weighed from 6 to 10 pounds lighter to the sack than Mr. Christopherson's grain.

Sane Action Urged on Staff by OSC Prexy

Corvallis—Sane thinking and sound achievement were urged upon the staff of Oregon State college by President George W. Peavy in his annual address to the faculty given just before the institution opened its seventieth year of service with the beginning of freshman week, September 20.

President Peavy reviewed the course of events in Oregon's higher education in the past few years as it has affected Oregon State, pointed out recent betterments as well as needs in a material way, and cautioned the staff against any attitude of smugness over past achievements.

Turning to national and world affairs, Dr. Peavy called attention to the alarming increase in international strife, and to the domestic discord, particularly as applied to the labor situation.

"It is my feeling that in these times of stress a peculiar obligation rests upon public educational institutions," said Dr. Peavy. "These institutions have direct responsibilities to the government which created them. Where may we expect sane thinking if not in our state colleges and universities?"

Reviewing the progress of the unified system of higher education, now starting its sixth year, President Peavy said that harmony and effectiveness follow strict adherence to the principle that each institution must function in its own field, without attempting to become a complete educational organization in itself. Oregon State wants nothing so much as to be let alone, he said.
