Wild Life Agencies to Confer Again at OSC

The second annual Oregon Wild Life conference has been called by Governor Charles H. Martin to meet at Oregon State college December 8 and 9, in which all organizations and individuals interested in Oregon's wild life resources are invited to participate. A similar conference held a year ago resulted in the formation of the Oregon Wild Life Federation, of which Ed Averill of Portland is president. Mr. Averill will preside at the second conference.

While the program is not yet complete, the principal features have been outlined, which indicate that important subjects will be considered by the conference, one of the chief items of which will be methods of stream purification in this state, according to R. E. Dimick, head of the game management department at Oregon State college, who is cooperating in handling arrangements.

Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the U. S. biological survey and a former Oregonian, will headline the program, which will also include Governor Martin among the speakers. Both Martin and Gabrielson will speak at the annual banquet, to be held the evening of December 8. Last year close to 400 persons attended this function.

The purpose of the conference this year is to follow through on the plans and programs started a year ago, say those in charge. The movement to unite all interested agencies in an intelligent development of wild life resources started two years ago with the holding of a national conference in Washington, D. C. Oregon followed this up with a big conference a year ago, and now seeks to continue the work thus started.

Agencies which have accepted invitations to participate in the conference include the biological survey, the U. S. bureau of fisheries, the U. S. forest service, the State Game commission, the State Fish commission, the organized livestock industry, and the Oregon State college of agriculture, in which is the department of fish, game and fur animal management.

Agricultural Staff To Hold Meeting

Agricultural and home economics workers of the entire state who operate under the auspices of Oregon State college will meet on the campus December 13 to 16 this year for their annual conference.

As has been customary in recent years, the conference includes the entire extension, experiment station and instructional staffs, which makes possible the planning of programs for the coming year on a well coordinated basis. The annual conference period affords opportunity for the field staff, now maintained in every county in the state, to confer with members of other divisions in the school of agriculture on problems affecting their areas, says Wm. A. Schoenfeld, dean and director of agriculture. In addition, it permits unified consideration of national and state policies and trends in connection with agricultural work.

President G. W. Peavy, Dean Schoenfeld, and Frank L. Ballard, vice-director of the extension service, have recently returned from national organization meetings of the land grant colleges in Washington, D. C., and will be prepared to report on cooperative work with the department of agriculture.

Other prominent speakers to be heard at the conference will include Ira M. Gabrielson, head of the U. S. biological survey; Frederick M. Hunter, chancellor of the state system of higher education, and Dr. W. J. Kerr, long head of Oregon State and now chancellor-emeritus and director of production and marketing research in the state system.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Francis of Warrenton, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dutton of Portland were week-end visitors here, Mr. and Mrs. Francis being guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Dixon, and Mr. and Mrs. Dutton being guests at the J. J. Wightman and Claude Graham homes. Mr. Francis is mayor of Warrenton.
