Brain Buster

Answer to last week's Brain Buster: 1. Brazil; 2. Lawrence W. Crumere; 3. The embargo was lifted in June, 1936.

This week's Brain Buster: Who was the ruler who made it illegal for a subject to offer a guest more than three courses at one meal?

Humor and Discretion

A sense of humor is a priceless possession. Abraham Lincoln probably had the greatest sense of humor because he did not take himself so seriously that he was made ridiculous.

It is a fine thing to be funny—within limits. No one can be funny all the time. Even professional humorists can't do it. If a person tries, over a radio, to make people laugh half an hour each week, he soon breaks down in the attempt and falls in public esteem.

Such is the way in high school! A student who tries to be funny all the time soon falls in the esteem of his fellow students.

Since, then, one cannot be funny all the time, the wise man will not undertake it. The foolish and inexperienced students will.

Do You Know That?

High upon the mountains in Colorado you would find red snow? This is due to the presence of minute living organisms, a form of algae.

Some fish of the deep sea are equipped with illuminating devices? A camel has double eyelids, the inner one being transparent.

The Federal Drug act does not require the makers of drugs to state on labels the presence of deadly poisons such as arsenic, strychnine, etc?

On the barber's pole that the red stripe represented blood and the white stripes the bandages that were used.

The hornet is a deadly enemy of the Cicidea (locust)?

The brain of an average man weighs about three pounds, while a woman's is five ounces less?

Odd But True!!

Mr. Peavy can't sit through a show. Van Marter and Betty Happold seen at school Mondays.

English Ess. seems to be quite the rage now.

Semester grades suffering a recession.

Barratt needs a nerve tonic. Jean Hayes didn't sign out of the assembly.

It looks like Rufus is cutting Clayton Wright out.

Miss Nordstrom keeps the freshmen in hand.

Pat Healy's black eye isn't any more.

Bob thought his gas was getting low; He struck a match; the tank let go. Bob sailed three miles right in the air:

Three miles on a pint is pretty fair.

PINTO-POINTS

A glance at a road map will reveal that instead of being divided into the present eastern and western divisions, the Upper Columbia Athletic league could just as well be termed sections possessing the names of the two remaining general directions, that of northern and southern . . . if the highway explanation that the Union Oil Co. publishes can justify itself as an authority, at least as far as accuracy in exposing directions is concerned, then our point is well taken . . . it seems that Ione and Lexington, the southern-most members of the eastern division, are west of Heppner, the town that happens to be more south than west of Echo and Stanfield, eastern division . . . also, our own little city is almost directly south of Boardman, a school in the division of the eastern league, is the northernmost school in the western division . . . therefore, the northern team of the western division should be the same of the southern division . . . a boundary dividing this area into a northern and southern division would settle this most complicated matter.

A freckled, red-faced man, his hair having the same tint as his countenance, wearing a none too clean trench-coat, visited our local metropolis shortly after Christmas, and his intentions while here were far from being for the benefit of his hosts . . . he had an idea, we'll call it a scheme, that resulted in several down-town merchants having to leave an extra line in the ledger for profit and loss, mostly loss . . . in short, he left town with some money for which he gave nothing in return . . . he went around to some of the business houses asking if they wanted an advertising space on the placard he was putting out that contained the basketball schedules for the remainder of the season of Heppner, Pilot Rock, Ione, and Lexington . . . after obtaining a few dollars, he left town and has not been seen since . . . however, he left his name on a receipt written out for money received, whether it be fictitious or not remains to be seen . . . the question is, why didn't he put out the schedules, as he did just that in Pendleton, thus giving the Round-Up city sports boosters something for their money, whereas Heppner residents of the same nature were left nothing but a sour taste in their mouths and a bitter feeling for the slicker, whose name has been sent in to the press association in an attempt to trace him.

Curfew Chatter: After the games the Mustangs played last week end, winning two from teams favored over them, the general consensus is that Heppner has a better bunch of ball-hawkers than was generally thought. A member of the Irrigon contingent, not a player, however, hinted that he thought Heppner was going to get even, which they did, for their defeat in the game played at the small river-city . . . the boys over there, in this Irrigon fan's estimation, were playing too much ball and were very near that dreaded stage of going stale. A few figures . . . average height of local squad, just a shade under 5 feet 9 inches . . . average points per game in nine contests for Mustangs, 28 . . . for opponents, 27. Low grades resulted in dismissal of one of the boys from the grade school quintet . . . Lexington lost its reserve via the same route . . . the grades in Heppner are not issued until this week, and until then, the stability of our "thundering herd" is uncertain. One thing most enlightening in games to date is the sparkling play of the freshmen . . . more encouraging is that they are the team of the future years for Heppner High. Just a reminder . . . there still remains unpaid for, some athletic equipment that was "purchased" in the fall of last year by a few athletes of the school, namely, football shoes.

Van Marter not being absent on Monday morning?

Stop signs are just as important in preventing accidents as traffic lights and signals, Secretary of State Earl Snell declares. He reminds motorists that other drivers may be depending on through-street markers to protect them against fast cross traffic, and any disregarding of the markers is apt to have disastrous results.
