Boardman Hunter Tells Coyote Work

By LA VERN BAKER

The biology class under the supervision of G. A. Corwin, motored out to visit Mr. Knoblock last Friday morning, in the bus. Adam Knoblock, Boardman federal hunter of Morrow county, is one of the best and most picturesque of the United States biological survey's predatory animal killers. Adam said that the coyote situation in Oregon is now well in hand. The predatory animal control has been established in this state for about twenty years. Prior to its establishment in this state sheepmen estimated an annual loss of 10 percent based on the total census of their flocks. Today figures show that the loss has been reduced to 1.1 percent. "Even with the loss all over Oregon placed as low as 1.1 percent," said Adam, "the sum concerned is still tremendous, as Oregon's 2,382,500 sheep and goats are valued at $25,000,000, which would bring the annual coyote loss in money to $281,350. It should be remembered, too, that these figures concern sheep only and that the depredation of coyotes on poultry and game birds are impossible even to estimate. The coyote is nature's craftiest killer, a shrewd animal that thrives in relatively thickly populated areas. Organized warfare on the coyote, such as is carried on by the federal government, is the only way to control them."

HEPPNER GAZETTE TIMES

Governor Martin and Bonneville

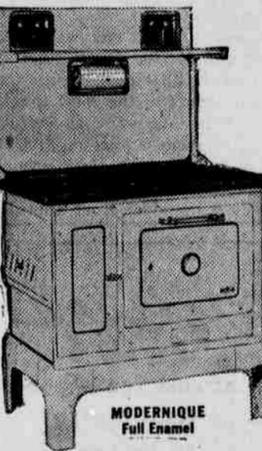

The allocation by the President of funds for the construction of the Bonneville project was, in a large measure, due to the activities of Genral Martin while serving this State as a member of the Congress.

Declaring that the project should be administered for the best interests of all the people in the State, the Governor has, to this end, pledged himself to co-operate with the President and Administrator Ross in every way possible.

It was largely through his efforts that ship locks were included in the Bnneville project—thus making it possible for sea going vessels to take on and deliver cargoes as far up stream as The Dalles. He has never ceased his fight for the canalization of the Upper Columbia in order that the grain growers and shippers of the Inland Empire may enjoy such favorable rates as are obtained through water competition.
