ment in favor of such enforcement. Sauter offered assistance with construction and placing of the screens and ladders, lending his knowledge as how the individual problems may be solved without undue expense. Wehmeyer offered a number of questions for discussion, and offered the assistance of his office so far as possible in carrying out game conservation work. Acting on his suggestion for check dams in the upper creek to provide more resting places for trout, it was expected groups of club members would construct dams themselves.

The forester's suggestion that importation of beaver will assist the conservation work resulted in the club's supporting a request already made by him for seventy more beaver and a $300 appropriation to assist in their planting.

Another suggestion of his that the club affiliate with the National Wild Life federation caused the decision to investigate the possibilities of such affiliation.

The creation of a trout brooding stream out of the left fork of Willow creek, a project started last year, gained enthusiastic support for its immediate continuance. The project calls for acceptance of proffered help from the state game commission in closing this creek, screening it off and stocking it with 25,000 fingerling trout the increase from which will be turned into the main creek at proper intervals to augment the stream's fish population.

Another club resolution favored the use of funds from game license revenues to compensate land holders for depredations of game animals.

In line with the latter resolution, the retiring president, Mark Merrill, voiced appreciation of the cooperative spirit of livestock men for providing winter feeding for deer and elk, and expressed regret that Frank B. Wire, head of the state game commission, had recently been quoted as making unkind remarks about the livestock men and forest service.

SALEM—Possibility that Oregon's gubernatorial contest may develop into a three-way fight in the general election campaign is now receiving consideration in political circles. Should Governor Martin win the democratic nomination and Charles A. Sprague be selected by the Republicans it is regarded as almost certain that an independent candidate of more liberal leanings than either of these will enter the race with a bid for the left-wing support of both parties. Should this situation develop, as is entirely within the range of probabilities, it is expected that Peter Zimmerman of Yamhill county who came within 21,000 votes of victory four years ago, will again make the try.

Oregon's school population continues to show a steady increase, according to figures compiled by Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction. In the four year period from 1933-34 to 1937-38, the number of youngsters on the school census roll increased from 258,880 to 270,530, a gain of 11,650. Malheur county experienced the greatest increase in school population, from 3590 to 5533, a gain of 54.12 percent. Klamath county reported the next highest gain, 27.36 percent. Other counties recording large gains include Hood River 16.42, Harney 14.10, Marion 13, Linn 12.41, Lane 12.19, Polk 11.84, Deschutes 11.72, Benton 11.19, Coos 9.32, Washington 8.99, and Curry 8.94.

California's border inspection and ban on Oregon strawberries was imposed in retaliation for Oregon's tomato and bulb quarantine, according to Solon T. White, state director of agriculture.

"Is God dead?" Mary questioned. "Why, no," said her father, "why do you ask?" "Well," she replied, "you never talk about Him any more." The simple question of a little child has stabbed spiritually awake many a man who, though calling himself a Christian, was little more than a "pleasing pagan." Children speak naturally about GOD. We grown-ups can do so, too, without violating proper reserve. It is easy enough to sing "What a Friend We Have in Jesus"—but what sort of a friend has He in us?"

"I have lived for myself, I have thought for myself, For myself and none beside; Just as if Jesus had never lived, And as if He had never died."

The subject for the morning service will be "After Easter, What?"

The evening service will be evangelistic.

in Oregon have been sterilized during the past 12 years, according to a report of the state board of health.

Governor Martin has requested all citizens of Oregon to join in the observance of child health day, May 1.

State hospital officials express themselves as highly gratified over the results of experiments conducted in the use of insulin and metrazol in the treatment of mental cases. These experiments conducted over a period of six months are said to have shown definite possibilities of permanent cures of dementia praecox, the most prevalent form of insanity. Of the 2600 patients in the Salem institution 60 percent have been regarded as incurable until the introduction of this new treatment.

Landscaping of the grounds about the new capitol is now under way. With construction work on the building practically completed scaffolding is being torn down and the job of cleaning up the premises started with a view to turning the building over to the state some time in June.

The oldest enlisted man in the Oregon National Guard is Clarence C. Smith, 61, of Portland, records at Guard headquarters here revealed. Of the 2239 enlisted men in the Oregon Guard 65 percent are under 23 years of age.

Construction of a new heating plant to serve the capitol group of buildings will now probably be deferred until after the next legislative session. Attorney General Van Winkle threw a legal monkey wrench into the plan for immediate construction of such a plant this week when he ruled that surplus funds in the hands of the Capitol Reconstruction commission can only be expended on the capitol site or the four new blocks to the north. Previously the attorney general had indicated that the commission might finance construction of the plant if the Board of Control provided the necessary site.

When the Capitol commission contracted for construction of the new library building it also let a contract for revamping of the present heating plant. This proposed revamping includes installation of an additional boiler, moving of the smoke stack 150 feet to the east and camouflaging of the plant under a screen of flowers and shrubbery. The enlarged plant, it is claimed, will meet the needs of the state for the next ten years at least. Some members of the commission are known to be in favor of going thru with this program. A majority of the commission, however, appears to favor delay of any action on the heating plant until the legislature can be induced to authorize construction of a new plant on a site removed from the capitol building.

Oregon's lawmakers batted well above the national average in point of production at the last regular session, according to figures compiled by the American Legislators association. While the national average of bills passed during the session was only 440, Oregon's legislative mill turned out a total of 502 bills. Only 11 states had a higher production record and these were all populous states, including California, Connecticut, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Nebraska's unicameral legislature introduced a total of 912 measures but passed only 212 during the session, or less than 50 percent as many as did Oregon's legislature.

The first public school administrator's credential to be issued by the Oregon state board of education under a recently adopted regulation, went to Dr. J. E. Cramer, superintendent of schools at Eugene. Certificate number 2 went to James M. Burgess, head of the Milton-Free-water school, and the third certificate went to Austin Landreth of Pendleton. A total of 68 school administrators have already applied for the new certificates.

Oregon will lose approximately $3,000,000 in federal aid funds if Congress cuts the highway appropriation in two as recommended by the House committee. The state highway commission, meeting here this week, sent telegrams to all members of the Oregon delegation in Congress urging that they oppose the threatened curtailment of funds.

More than $2,000,000 was paid out to jobless workers in Oregon during the first three months operation of the new unemployment insurance act. Nearly 6000 claims were satisfied in full during the first quarter, maximum benefits averaging $73.

Oregon is making a strong bid for tourist travel this year, according to Harold B. Say, in charge of the travel information bureau of the state highway department. In addition to attractive advertisements in magazines of nation-wide circulation display booths are also being maintained in two of the nation's outstanding spring travel shows—the one at Los Angeles this week sponsored by the Automobile Club of Southern California, and one at Chicago sponsored by the International Travel Exposition, April 26 to May 1.

Twenty-one women are candidates for state offices this year. Four of these are republicans and 17 are democratic candidates. Four women—two republicans and two democrats—aspire to seats in the state senate. Sixteen women—two republicans and 14 democrats—have filed for House seats. Mrs. Emily F. Edson of Portland, democratic national committeewoman, is a candidate for secretary of state.
