SALEM—Sixty-seven of the 76 members of the last legislature whose terms are expiring are candidates in the primary campaign now being waged. Forty-two of the 60 members of the House of Representatives are seeking re-election. Of these 16 are Republicans and 26 Democrats. Five House members—two Republicans and three Democrats—seek promotion to the state senate. Two former representatives Walter Norblad of Astoria and Jack Wagner, Portland democrat—are candidates for Congress. Two House democrats—Clarence F. Hyde of Eugene and Paul E. Roth of Portland—would like to be state labor commissioner. One House member—O. Henry Oleen of St. Helens—is out after the Democratic nomination for governor.

Eight Republican and five Democratic members of the state senate are candidates for re-election. One senator—Dellmore Lessard, Portland democrat—is a candidate for the Multnomah county district attorneyship. Senator U. S. Baentine whose term does not expire until 1141, is a candidate for Congress from the second district.

Oregon's own Agricultural Adjustment act is back on the statute books but it is hardly probable that it will ever be put into effect. The state supreme court reversed the decree of the circuit court holding the act to be unconstitutional but in doing so the higher tribunal refused to accept responsibility for passing upon the status of the law. In sidestepping this question the court took refuge behind the argument that inasmuch as there was no bona fide controversy between the parties to the suit no relief could be had under the declaratory judgment act. Deciding hypothetical questions, the court held, is not a judicial function. Two members of the court, however, took issue with the majority members on this point. Justice Rossman, in a dissenting opinion, declared that the "very purpose of the declaratory judgments act is to enable the courts to step in before damage is inflicted." Justice Rand went even farther to declare that the act is unconstitutional for the same reasons as were set forth in the previous case in which the original state AAA was held to be unconstitutional. Solon T. White, director of agriculture, refused to comment upon the court's opinion but indicated that he has no present intention of attempting to enforce the act which constitutes him a virtual dictator over the agricultural industry with power to regulate prices, production and distribution of agricultural products.

Governor Martins' special committee on probation, parole and sentencing of prisoners, meeting here this week, recommended that work camps be established for the employment of trustees and parolees in forestry, conservation and other public works projects. Men employed in these camps would be paid a small compensation "to enable them to make a start when released into society."

Apparently reversing a previous and that the present situation constituted an emergency under which the State Emergency board might provide the money necessary to finance the purchase.

Negotiations are already under way with the Public Works administration in an effort to transfer a portion of the federal grant from the new library building to the proposed heating plant. If the necessary permission is forthcoming the commission is expected to rush plans for construction of the new plant which will serve not only the new capitol and library building but the supreme court building, office building and agricultural building.
