Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hoskins were calling in the city yesterday morning for a short time from the Rhea creek ranch. Fred didn't have too much to say about the 23-5 drubbing his Ione baseball proteges took at the hands of Pendleton last Sunday, but said they have girded themselves to make it plenty hot for Heppner when the locals visit the Egg City next Sunday.

Relatives here have received word that Crocket Sprouls has been transferred from Hood River to The Dalles in his work with Standard Service Stations, Inc. Mr. Sprouls, local boy, was manager of the local station before going to Hood River where he has been located for more than a year.

Paul Webb of Walla Walla was transacting business in the city the end of the week Mr. Webb followed ranching in this county for many years, but never in his recollection can he remember spring growing prospects as favorable as they are this season.

Tom Boylen, Jr., of Echo was in the city yesterday making offers of from 15 to 17½ cents on local wool. Growers generally have showed little interest in prices so far offered, with some inclination to sell should the market pass the 20-cent mark.

Johnny Baker, former Gilliam county clerk who now represents the state unemployment compensation commission in eastern Oregon with headquarters at Klamath Falls, was a visitor in the city Monday and Tuesday.

William Gosney entered the veterans' hospital at Walla Walla last Friday for treatment in an illness of some standing. C. J. D. Baman and Loyal R. Parker accompanied him to the Washington city in the Bauman car.

HEALTH WORK ON

Immunization of students of five schools against diphtheria and smallpox was completed yesterday at Boardman and Irrigon by Dr. R. M. Rice assisted by Miss Althea Stoneman, temporary county health nurse. Besides the Boardman and Irrigon school pupils, those of Alpine, Pine City and Willows were inoculated besides many parents for a total of 145. Today the health workers are at Lexington and Ione, and they will be at Heppner tomorrow to finish up the county-wide campaign.

4-H CLUB MEETS

The 4-H club had a social meeting April 28th in the Home Economics department of the high school. The third year cooking club members honored the first and second year members with a dinner. The tables were lighted by candles and a good time was had by all.—Alice McGrew, reporter.

Alvah W. Patterson Early Day Publisher

Alvah W. Patterson who helped conduct the destinies of the old Heppner Gazette as a member of the Patterson Publishing company firm, died last Friday at his home in Washington, D. C., after a short illness. He was an attorney with Public Works administration at time of death.

A clipping from the Washington press says:

Mr. Patterson was a native of Indiana, but moved to Oregon when a young man. In 1899 he came here as clerk of the House Committee on Irrigation and Public Lands, then headed by Representative Ellis of Oregon.

In 1901 Mr. Patterson joined the legal staff of the Interior department under retired Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter, then assistant attorney general. He advanced rapidly in the department and for a number of years was senior member of the board of appeals under the department solicitor's office. He was transferred to PWA in 1936.

The attorney was a member of La Fayette lodge, Scottish Rite, Almas Temple, and Capital Forest, Tall Cedars of Lebanon.

Surviving are two brothers, Dr. Carl Patterson, Baker, Ore., and Orin L. Patterson, Canyon City, Ore., and a sister, Miss Helena M. Patterson, Indianapolis. Mr. Patterson's wife died two years ago.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Monday at 10 a. m., with burial in Masonic mausoleum, Alexandria, Va.

Charles McElligott was a business visitor in the city yesterday from the farm in the Ione section. Crop prospects in his district are reported as exceedingly good.

Farm and Industry Incomes Parallel

Figures on total far mincome in Oregon and industrial workers' income in the United States show remarkable similarity in trends over a period of years, according to data published by the O. S. C. extension service. The relationship is not so close in respect to farm income from some commodities as for others, however. Consumer demand and prices for certain items like meat, butter, and fruits and vegetables, tend to follow the fortunes of industrial workers in a greater degree than demand and prices for some other commodities like wheat and potatoes for which demand is less "elastic" and prices react largely to the size of the supply, as well as being affected somewhat by the strength of demand.

The general relationship between the income of fruit and vegetable producers in the United States and the income of the industrial workers is shown in the accompanying chart. The incomes of industrial workers is thus shown to be a pretty fair barometer of probable gross farm income from fruits and vegetables. Moderate deviations in the trend in income of the two groups of producers are usually associated with variations in the supply of the commodities, changes in foreign demand for export products, and other special factors.

The period 1924 to 1929 was a relatively stable period on both farm income and industrial workers' income, but both took a heavy tail-spin from 1930 to 1932, then rose together until 1937. Extension service reports show a sharp decline during
