

Community Sale Idea Endorsed; Scout Camp Talked

Lions Told Farmers Auction Beneficial; Hidaway Favored

Heppner Lions gave hearty response to the idea of a community auction at their Monday luncheon. B. C. Pinckney, local branch bank manager, gave personal knowledge of where such events have been the means of establishing a local livestock market that proved of invaluable service to the surrounding farming community. Other club members also looked upon it as a service that should prove profitable to the entire community.

The club response was given on invitation for discussion by F. W. Turner, who with V. R. Runnion, auctioneer, announced the first community auction to be held here Saturday, June 18.

Lions also inspected the trophy they sponsored for the first time this year on which high point winners in FFA work will have names engraved each year. William Bennett, Smith-Hughes instructor, explained the point system under which the names of Jack Healy with 175 points, and Clayton Wright, 174 points, were both engraved this year. Through representing the local chapter at the state speaking meet, Healy gained an exceptional number of points, while Wright's were gained on all-round work, Bennett said. He expected some alteration to be made in the system of awarding points so that no particular branch of the work would be unduly emphasized, as he thought it may have been this year.

Mr. Pinckney, reporting for the Boy Scout committee, told of status of the Boy Scouts to date with membership of 23 expected soon to be raised to 26 or 27, and the projected plan of establishing a summer camp in the mountains. With Tom Wells, scoutmaster, he attended a district scout meeting at Arlington on the 11th at which the plan was launched to establish a joint camp for scouts of Morrow, Gilliam and Wheeler counties. In the club discussion the idea of postponing the camp's establishment pending agreement of the various troops was endorsed. It appeared too late to come to such agreement for this season, and the balance of opinion favored making arrangements to send the local troop to Hidaway springs. Any summer camp for the boys should include swimming facilities, it was strongly believed.

Mr. Pinckney announced that the committee had the formation of a cub pack under advisement but that no attempt would be made to organize the smaller boys before fall.

Bulbous Blue Grass Gaining in Interest

Bulbous bluegrass as an early grass furnishing feed early in the spring is attracting wide attention this year in all of the Columbia basin counties. Here in Morrow county the oldest stand of bulbous bluegrass is that seeded on the Wightman brothers farm near Heppner. The stand on this field is six years old. Two years ago an area of about four or five square rods was fenced to give it protection from grazing and the stand inside the enclosure is really remarkable considering the thin, rocky character of the ground.

Bulbous bluegrass has been slow in starting but once it has gained a foothold it has spread rapidly. One of the interesting things about the plantings on the Wightman ranch is the almost complete absence of cheat grass and the manner in which the bulbous bluegrass is crowding out the pepper grass and other weeds.

Bulbous bluegrass is a native of Siberia in combination with crested wheat grass. Millions of acres of Siberian range lands is seeded to this grass and growing in combination just as our native bunch grass and so called June grass used to grow on range land in Morrow county. Seeded in combination with crested wheat grass a considerable amount of bulbous bluegrass will be used in the Columbia basin counties this fall for seeding diverted land under the farm program. Both grasses are slow in starting which is to be expected considering the nature of grass and the light rate per acre at which they have been seeded. Except for seed production neither grass provides complete pasture when seeded alone.

Several plantings have been made of bulbous bluegrass seeded in alfalfa on creek bottom lands. The attempt here is to find a grass that will crowd out cheat and make it unnecessary to spring-tooth.

The extreme earliness of bulbous bluegrass makes it probable that within the next few years a considerable amount of this grass will be scattered on range lands. Experience has shown that while slow in getting under way this grass is comparatively easy to start and once started spreads readily.
