respectfully request an additional price adjustment payment to growers cooperating under the farm act, of 12 cents per bushel, such payment to be for the purpose of reimbursing the grain grower for a lower loan basis than is provided under the Farm Act of 1938."

Another vital message of importance to Morrow county was brought by E. C. Parkinson of the state board of health, who with his co-worker, G. H. Heryford, was a guest at the luncheon.

Parkinson and Heryford are working on a field survey to determine the extent of bubonic plague infection among rodents of the state, and Parkinson sounded a warning for farmers to be on the lookout for death or disappearance of ground squirrels from unknown causes and to avoid a practice of using dead squirrels to kill other squirrels. Mysterious disappearance or death of squirrels may mean the presence of bubonic plague, and use of dead squirrels in getting rid of live ones may be the means of further spreading the dread disease which was originally brought into the United States from the orient by infected rats.

First outbreak of the plague occurred in central California where the germ-carrying flea transmitted the disease from rats to squirrels, and the infection has since been spread throughout the northwest states and into British Columbia, Parkinson said.

Squirrels that die from the disease are fed on by the fleas which in turn may transmit it to humans.

One known death from the plague occurred in 1934 in Lake county where a shepherd succumbed to it, Parkinson said. Investigators believe there have probably been other deaths which the diagnosing physician failed to recognize as having been caused by it.

An investigation was conducted last year of dying squirrels in the Camas prairie region, but Parkinson reported that no definite findings of the disease were made. He cited known instances of infection in Lake, Grant and other Oregon counties, however.

Al Williams, accomplished young Portland singer, visiting in the city, sang two numbers accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. O. Turner, and was well received. Dwight Misner of Thornton, Wash., was a guest.

Leader Explains Proper Care for Pillow Feathers

While pillows are usually taken for granted as an article of household furnishings and given little thought after once required, the feathers as well as the covering do wear out, and need renovating about once every ten years or oftener, says Mrs. Eileen Buxton, extension specialist in clothing at Oregon State college.

The natural oil in the feathers dries out after a while, and the quills then become brittle and break, she says. When pillows are no longer soft, elastic and light, they probably need new feathers.

Although goose feathers are much better for pillows than the feathers of turkeys, ducks or chickens, the latter can be used if the fowl has been dry picked or cleaned, but scalding injures the quality of the feathers, Mrs. Buxton says. Geese may be plucked as often as every six weeks through the spring, summer, fall, and winter, up to the mating season. Care is necessary, however, with feathers obtained in this manner to see that they are of the proper ripeness, which means that the quills appear dry and do not contain blood.

In plucking the entire plumage of a fowl, the tail and wing feathers are removed first. These are of no value for feathers to be used in pillows. The ammonia content of wet feathers causes them to deteriorate rapidly. Dirty or bloody feathers may be sprayed with water and the moisture then extracted by squeezing or putting through a wringer, first putting the feathers in a muslin bag. They are then dried thoroughly in a warm place with an occasional shaking. A warm, breezy day is best, keeping the feathers in the shade most of the time.

If the fowl has been dry picked and the feathers do not need washing, they are put in a muslin bag and hung in a dry, warm place for about a week, being stirred thoroughly once a day.

Locals Drop Bucks With Errorless Play

himself in turning in his beautiful chucking job.

The locals didn't get started until the fourth when a fluke home run was scored by Hempe. His Texas leaguer was lost in the right field grass and was not found for several minutes after he had made the circuit. Singles by Thomson and Davidson leading off the fifth, followed after two were gone by Al Massey's single accounted for two more tallies. The final scoring came in the sixth. Schwabacher walked Rodman and allowed Ray Massey a single when he was relieved on the mound by D. Heathman who in turn gave Turner a fielder's choice on which Rodman was safe at home on the play for him. Thomson walked and as he started to steal a short throw was made to shortstop who muffed the ball but recovered in time to catch Massey in his attempt to reach home. Davidson bounded to short who cut off Thomson at second, then took second on a passed ball and scored along with Turner when F. Heathman at second made a wild pig of Gentry's grounder. Hottman was out short to first to end that.

Next Sunday Heppner plays the Indians at Mission.
