Oregon State College—This college is to be a year-round institution this year with the inauguration of a double summer session. The first session starts June 20 and ends July 29, while the second five-week session starts August 1 and ends September 2. Longer periods permit nine credits to be taken in the second session, the normal load for the first. In the first session courses are arranged in home economics, industrial arts, education and guidance, science, secretarial science, and many general courses. In the second session courses are largely confined to science and education.

Mrs. Flo Beymer and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wright are visiting relatives and friends in this county from their homes in the San Francisco bay region.

Kavanagh Leaves Forest Region

E. K. Kavanagh, who for the past twenty years has been assistant regional forester in charge of wild life and range management for the North Pacific region of the forest service, will leave about July 1 to accept the position of assistant regional forester in charge of education and information in the Intermountain region, with headquarters at Ogden, Utah, according to announcement of regional forester, C. J. Buck. He will be succeeded by L. H. Douglas, former chief of range management for the Rocky Mountain region, Denver, Colorado.

"Kavanagh has contributed to the sound progress of range and wild life management in Oregon and Washington during the years he has been in this region," said Mr. Buck. "He has established a wide acquaintanceship among stockmen of this region, and has secured their friendly cooperation in promoting the orderly and scientific use of the grazing resource, and its coordination with wild life problems on the national forest range. He leaves a solid foundation upon which his successor can build in the wise use of these important forest resources."

Kavanagh came to the Portland office in August, 1918. Prior to that time he had served through the various field grades, entering the forest service as forest guard in the Rocky Mountain region in August, 1906.

His wide experience admirably fits him for his new assignment in the largest national forest region in the United States, where range livestock constitutes an integral part of the economic life of the local communities, according to Buck. The coordination of range management with community needs and with the uses of other forest resources is an important activity on each of the twenty-four national forests comprising the Intermountain region.

AAA Warns Motorists Of Summer Hazards

Despite favorable driving conditions, most fatal traffic accidents occur during clear dry weather, and a special warning has been issued to vacationing motorists by the Oregon State Motor association.

According to W. R. McDonald, director of the motoring group in charge of safety, 83 per cent of all fatal crashes occur when the elements are most suited to the reliable operation of an automobile.

Here are a few rules for vacationists to follow:

1. Simply remember, that if you are in an accident while traveling more than 40 miles per hour there is one chance in only 19 that someone will be killed. National statistics, however, show that if you are traveling under 40 miles per hour, there is only one chance in 44 that someone will be killed. Death, they say, begins at 40.

2. Turn the wheel over to someone else if you are very tired—or stop and rest. At least six terrible fatal crashes were caused by fatigue last year in Oregon alone.

3. Be as alert on the open road as you are in the city. An accident occurring on an apparently unobstructed highway is much more likely to be fatal than one in a congested area. 15,600 out of 40,300 persons killed in 1937 died on the open road. A clear, straight highway is often like an unloaded gun.

4. Always watch for pedestrians. Pedestrian traffic increases with the advent of summer weather—and when you are a pedestrian be on the lookout for cars. Records show that nearly 50% of all persons killed are pedestrians.

5. Before you start on your vacation, be sure that your lights, tires and brakes are in good condition. It's easier to avoid accidents if your car responds properly.

And finally, the most fundamental rule of all is courtesy. By playing fair with the other fellow you will not only find safe driving more simple but enjoy a pleasant and care-free vacation.

Besides those mentioned, those attending the shoot included Mrs. P. W. Mahoney, Mrs. Luke Bibby, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kane, Mrs. C. H. Latourell, Miss Alice Latourell, H. E. Warner and Ralph Jackson of Lexington were there also, as well as Mr. Jackson's brother Dave of Pendleton.
