

Heppner's Progress, Growth Transcend Depression Average

By ARTHUR R. CRAWFORD

Revisiting Heppner at intervals of from two to six years over the past 20 as the writer has, opportunity is afforded to note the progress of this finest little town on earth that perhaps passes unnoticed and to a degree, not fully appreciated by its constant citizenry. Let it be hoped that whatever comment may be made here will not receive the indictment of over-enthusiasm born of natural love of native land, or as coming from one who for two decades has been closely associated with "super-colossal" activities in our neighboring state on the south.

Probably, for one who has not visited Heppner in the past two years, the most outstanding and certainly the most favorable reaction, comes from the new hard-surfaced streets and, by the same token, the utter absence of old "debbil" dust. Perhaps this may be the key to the whole secret of what makes a spick and span city. Clean streets. The people of Heppner and their apparently progressive city officials are to be congratulated on street improvement.

The writer notes much advancement here in a period that extends over a 10-year period, with each succeeding visit to the old home town finding a consistent, steady improvement, not only in things material as reflected in a better-built town, but in the great spirit of a fine people which has brought about the improvement in material things.

We return to find that today Heppner has a state champion band composed of its sturdy school pupils; we note that as an adjunct (and which the writer can so well appreciate in comparison with other days) the school plant has a fine gymnasium which would reflect credit on a city many times its size. We return to rediscover that Heppner, through the Gazette Times, has a weekly newspaper which, having won state-wide laurels in the field of journalism, is still outstanding in its field and a credit to the fourth estate as judged by exacting standards. It provides a medium that could be used to greater extent in advertising the town's merchandise and services.

We note that in every line of activity Heppner is keeping step with the modern trend. Here the stores carry and display up-to-the-minute merchandise, meeting a demand that comes from a people who are keyed to the tempo of the times. Such progress, as is evidenced in all communities building soundly for the future by conserving the profits of production for home industry first, calls for an intense application of the "trade-at-home" principle. Sooner or later up and coming trade centers realize that a dollar rolling away from home is a long, long time rolling back, and that its spender, for a meagre immediate advantage at the best at the time, is loser in the long run.

In the business section, we note, new buildings have been erected on lots long vacant, or where some old familiar land-mark of other days has been razed to make way for modern stream-lined structures. In other words, Heppner is going ahead and not back, which is something that many a rural and even industrial community of this country cannot boast in this period of uncertain economic stress.

But best of all and the thing that really counts for the old-timer coming home is the privilege of meeting old friends and making new ones; of doing a little reminiscing and considering something of what the future holds; and to take stock of the younger generation of Heppnerites who in a few brief years will be carrying on, seeking, and let us hope, finding the answers to many of the problems which we of today are rather gropingly and inefficiently trying to solve.

Legion Elects, Names Boy State Delegates

Wilbur Worden was chosen for attendance at Boy State camp, with Henry Peterson, Jr., as alternate, at the Monday evening meeting of the American Legion. Worden is the first Morrow county boy selected for the honor of attending the summer boys' camp sponsored by the state American Legion organization.

Election of officers and naming of delegates to the state convention at Pendleton also took place at the meeting. Henry Peterson was elected post commander; John Keys, vice-commander, and Loyd Parker, adjutant-finance officer. Convention delegates are Henry Peterson and Loyd Parker, with C. J. D. Bauman and Spencer Crawford as alternates.

Word was received this morning from Wilbur Worden that he would not be able to attend the camp. Henry Peterson, Jr., therefore will be sent by the Legion. The Lions committee named to select a boy to attend the camp also, yesterday announced Donald Bennet as delegate and Hugh Crawford, alternate. A third boy, sponsored by the Elks, will be named this evening.

The camp will start July 31 and will be held either at Camp Bonneville or Silver Creek falls, the definite selection having not yet been made.

CATTLE SHIPPED

Del Allstott who has been buying cattle in Heppner and vicinity for several weeks made the second shipment of two carloads from the local yards Saturday night. The cattle went to North Portland to yards of the company Mr. Allstott represents.

Forest Workers Go To School Monday

Entire protective personnel of the Umatilla National forest is attending fire school at Bear Wallow, near Ukiah. The school was to begin Monday, announced F. F. Wehmeyer, in charge of the Heppner district, who left for Bear Wallow Sunday.

This school is held each year to assist in organizing the season's forest protective work. While fire control work features the studies, about three dozen different courses in various phases of protective work are given, Wehmeyer said.

Mrs. Ellis Hendrickson and son Alvin arrived this week from their home at San Leandro, Cal., to visit for some time at the home of Mrs. Hendrickson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Jones.
