Topic Club-NYA Sponsor Libe Project

Widely read volumes that have become torn and dog-eared from long use by the reading public in Ione, will be less of a problem in the erection with the National Youth ad-future for the local library. In cooperation, the Women's Topic club will jointly sponsor a federal work project employing one girl between the age of 18 and 25 years to assist at the library, it was announced today by Ivan G. Munro, state director of the Youth administration.

Mr. Munro stated that the request for a work project presented by Mrs. Oral M. Feldman for the Topic club had been passed on and the project granted. Mrs. Feldman, who has had past experience with the library work will directly supervise the work. The young NYA worker will do clerical and general library work as well as mending and binding old volumes. NYA employees are encouraged to study subjects beneficial to themselves and the project work, Mr. Munro added, which is in line with Youth administration policy of assisting young persons to develop skills which will help them secure future private employment and to utilize their individual abilities.

Vital Education Topics Draw Many to OSC

Oregon State College—The problem of adequate guidance or counseling of students in high schools, and the progress in adult education beyond the school period, are among the most important in the educational field today judging from the interest shown in the third annual three-day conference on these subjects just held at Oregon State college.

Hundreds attended the conference and took part in the forum discussions which were an important feature of the sessions this year. Following are a few random though significant statements made during the meetings:

"You don't get too old to learn a new job or improve your present one if you will put as much effort in learning as you expect of youngsters,"—John Paul Williams, Massachusetts State college.

"Guidance is the every-day task of every teacher,"—Jesse Hawley, principal of Carpinteria, Calif., high school.

"Guidance is in transition; I hope someday we can forget the word and have it all included in the word education," Dr. D. W. Lefever, USC.

"Stripped of its face, the main essential of guidance is the ability to show personal interest and sympathy in the student's problems,"—Dr. H. R. Laslett, OSC.

"Written records in school of occasional student miss-steps are dangerous unless carefully used. Even Jesus didn't consider himself great enough to condemn for a single misdeed,"—Dr. Eugenia Leonard, director of guidance in Portland.
