

Lena Grange Adds Suspense Note in Rodeo Dances

Lex Princess to be Honored Saturday; Asks Parade Entries

The element of suspense thickened this week in organization of the Rodeo queen's court. As Princesses Joyce Carlson, Evelyn Kirk and Florence Becket were introduced at the first of the series of introduction dances held at the county pavilion here Saturday evening, Lena Grange, fourth attendant sponsor gave word that they were not yet ready to divulge identity of their young lady.

Their royal court member will be named as a surprise feature at their home dance, August 6.

Miss Evelyn Kirk will be the honored court member at next Saturday evening's dance to be held by the sponsoring body, Lexington grange, at their hall. Oral Scott, chairman of the dance committee, promises good music and a good time for everyone.

Miss Florence Becket's home dance at Rhea creek will be held July 30, and Miss Joyce Carlson will be the feted court member at Ione on August 13.

Assurance of the Rodeo association that no selection of the queen has been made was given by President Heynr Aiken this morning. While several names have been suggested, there has been no action of the directors, and he asked that anyone having names to submit do so at their earliest convenience.

Announcement of the queen will be made some time in the series of dances that will be wound up in Heppner on the evening of August 20 with the big celebration in her honor.

D. M. Ward and Frank Nickerson were named this week on the housing committee, and with announcement from Hotel Heppner that it has already reserved almost the entire house for the three days, August 26-27-28, it is necessary that those having private rooms available list them as soon as possible, Mr. Aiken said.

Additional stress is being placed again this year upon the big Saturday parade feature with the intention of showing as many relics of the Old West as possible. To this end Mr. Aiken asks that anyone knowing the whereabouts of old surreys, wagons, coaches or other relics make their location known. Liberal parade prizes will again be given to make the efforts of everyone worth while.

Dads Meet Engineers; Consider PWA Plans

body can properly and legally finance with governmental aid, such as schools, libraries, state, city and county buildings, hospitals, water-works, sewer systems, bridges and highways, will be given careful consideration by the Public Works administration.

"The size of the project should be such that it will necessitate advertising bids for contracts and require the services of an architect or engineer. The locality's share of the cost of construction should be financed out of current funds or through a bond issue.

"City and county officials and representatives of other public bodies throughout the region should arrange to hold meetings within the next few days to discuss their construction needs. After they have agreed upon a building program, they should submit their application to the PWA regional office at Portland.

"The Public Works administration under the new recovery program, is authorized to provide a grant of forty-five per cent of the estimated total cost of approved projects. Loans covering the remaining fifty-five per cent of the estimated cost of construction also may be obtained from the government, with adequate security, but public bodies are advised to finance their share of the

"The purpose of the 1938 PWA act is to relieve unemployment through useful construction. Speed is an essential factor in accomplishing this purpose. The Public Works administration is prepared to do its share. It is now up to the communities to cooperate by taking prompt action. They should carefully consider their building requirements, and present their needs to the Public Works administration without delay."

ARTIST FOR OLD "CHINOOK" GAINS PLACE IN FRENCH ACADEMY

Some thirty years ago students of Heppner high school issued a monthly publication, "The Chinook." It was largely literary in content and the few drawings it contained were the work of one Leandre Pavid, a student of high rating in the school.

Since graduation from the local high school, to these many years, Mr. Pavid has pursued the course of education and as professor of French for 18 years promoted the French ideals of education to a degree to gain for him an office in the French academy on a visit to Paris a few years ago, it was revealed on Mr. Pavid's visit here the end of the week. With Mrs. Pavid and son Michel he stopped at the home of his cousin, Mrs. Omar Rietmann, at Ione before going on with the family to Twin Falls, Idaho, to visit brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Pavid, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dix. From Twin Falls they expected to journey to Yellowstone National park before returning to their home at Sacramento, Cal., where Mr. Pavid is professor of French at Sacramento junior college.

Pavid looked up many old-time friends in Heppner Saturday, and enjoyed recalling incidents of the days spent here which he counts among the most enjoyable of his life.

Especially was he interested to learn the whereabouts of "Tige" Kenton, boyhood friend and famed for making the first "airplane flight" in the city. About three years ago

Pavid located Tige in Portland and ascertained that he had followed his childhood bent for inventiveness as a designing engineer. In a recent check-up, however, Tige was not present in Portland city, telephone or other directories.

Pavid recalled that he wasn't present when Tige's famous flight took place, though he recollected having watched much of the machine's construction. It was a glider much resembling a large box kite. On the memorable flight, attempted on the hill east of town, Kenton went with it some twenty feet into the air before it nosedived to earth, a mass of cheese cloth and bamboo splints. This, Pavid reminisced, was only one of a number of Kenton inventions that made Heppner natives prick up their ears.

The years since Pavid left Heppner have treated him kindly. Rather taller and his slender boyish figure showing the trace of a bulge at the waistline, a French toupee hiding the baldness of his upper lip and spectacles lending their bit to the professional mein, he is still wont to evidence more interest in others and be reticent about himself. But it has been gleaned that he has been president of the French club in Sacramento for three years and had the recent distinction of officially welcoming a visit to the club from the French consul general at San Francisco. In addition he has written a number of articles on current French topics published in a Sacramento newspaper.

Rodman to Condon In Soil Work Shift

Millard Rodman, superintendent of the local Soil Conservation service since its inception, was this week raised to the position of district supervisor in charge of work at Simnasho, Moro, Condon and Heppner, to be stationed at Condon as local project manager there as well. He succeeds Wm. W. Hill, resigned.

Succeeding Rodman as local project manager is James Kistner, transferred here from Warrenton, who arrived Tuesday. Kistner returned to Warrenton today to get his family.

The arrival of fifty new CCC enrollees at Camp Heppner last week increased the personnel of workers to 196, now under command of Lt. Marius P. Hanford. Forty-seven of the new arrivals came from Portland and three were inducted locally.
