More Crested Wheat Planted in Oregon

Additional crested wheat plantings of close to 50,000 acres in the Columbia basin wheat belt are being made this season, constituting the largest acreage ever to be planted in the state in one year, reports E. R. Jackman, extension crops specialist at OSC.

Three factors are chiefly responsible for this rapid increase, says Jackman. In the first place, many growers had to reduce their summerfallow acreage this fall in order to complete compliance under the 1938 AAA program, and become eligible for wheat loans. In the second place, under the 1939 program, payments of close to 30 cents per bushel will be available to those who keep their wheat acreage within their allotment. Crested wheat grass will be seeded on much of the surplus acreage.

Finally, seed is readily available at considerably lower prices this year, because of the large plantings already in production in this state. The Blue Mountain Seed Growers Cooperative association at La Grande is the largest single distributing agency for crested wheat grass in the west.

Eric Bergstrom and son Carl were among farmers of the Gooseberry section transacting business in the city Monday.

BPW AS PARTY

The Business and Professional Women's club held their regular meeting Monday evening. The first order of business was a theater party when the club went in a body to see the film, Marie Antoinette. After the show the group gathered at the home of Elizabeth Dix. Four new members, Alma Van Winkle, Florence Bergstrom, Ruth Green and Rachel Forsythe, were initiated into the club. Punch and wafers were served and the meeting closed with a progressive bedtime story.

Henry Baker was among farmers of the Gooseberry section in the city Tuesday. He reported the new wheat crop coming along nicely.

Fire Destroys Arlington Water System

P. P. & L. organization responsible for rapid restoration of service!

1. On July 4, 1931—a blistering hot day—fire destroyed the pump house and motor of the Arlington, Ore., water system, leaving the city without water except for a few hundred gallons in the storage tank.

2. Before water could be pumped again, a new motor had to be secured and installed. A P. P. & L. man, who was at hand, volunteered his assistance—began making long distance telephone calls. The warehouses were closed, but he finally located a motor distributor at an ocean resort.

3. This man sped back to Portland, opened his warehouse and assembled a crew of electricians, who worked so skillfully that a motor adapted to Arlington's needs rode the express car of the evening limited.

4. At midnight the motor was skidded from the car to a waiting truck. A company crew summoned from Kennewick had hung new transformers, replaced poles. Another crew from The Dalles had cleared debris and built a heavy platform for the motor.

5. Before 5 a.m., the motor was installed, and the pump operating. Arlington again had running water, largely because P.P. & L. men and materials are "Always at your service".

The 761 men and women who comprise the P.P. & L. organization are experienced in meeting emergencies. Fires, floods, storms and other catastrophes are constant foes of electric service, which must be maintained in spite of them or restored as quickly as possible. In preparedness, crews of skilled men and material resources are so organized that they may be promptly mobilized at any point in the company's 12 districts in Oregon and Washington.

The Pacific Power & Light Company people who live and work in your community have also helped make possible the steady reductions in your electric rates. Today, P.P. & L. rates are among the lowest in the United States, and will continue to drop as more and more people take full advantage of our low-cost dependable electric service.
