STATE CAPITAL NEWS

- $106 Million
- Fair Exhibit
- Balanced Budget

By A. L. LINDBECK

Salem—A total of $106,219,433.29 will be required to finance the numerous state boards, bureaus, commissions, departments and institutions during the next biennium, according to estimates by State Budget Director Wallace S. Wharton.

Only $1,078,008.03 of this amount, however, will be raised through tax levies against real property, if estimates advanced by the state tax commission prove correct. Income taxes are expected to yield $10,351,468.23 during the next two years and miscellaneous revenues accruing to the general fund during the biennial period are estimated at $3,800,000.

By far the greater portion of this huge financial program will come from sources other than property and income taxes. Gasoline taxes alone are expected to produce $22,594,000 with automobile license fees and operators' licenses contributing another $6,376,140 and truck and bus licenses and fees adding still another $2,240,000 toward the support of the highway department and the state police. Revenues of the state liquor commission for the biennium are estimated at $17,007,141 from the sale of liquor and permits alone with $2,023,105 more to come in from license and privilege taxes. Cost of the liquor to be sold through the state system during the next two years is estimated at approximately $11,000,000. Of this amount, together with the overhead costs of the commission must be deducted from the commission's revenues before the "profits" can be taken out for support of the state relief program.

Federal funds also play a big part in the financing of state functions. The unemployment compensation commission, for instance, expects to call on Uncle Sam for a total of $13,393,550 with which to pay the claims of jobless workers during the biennium while the highway commission is counting strong on federal aid for its road program to the extent of $5,378,000.

Inheritance taxes are expected to yield $900,000 during the biennium, corporation taxes for the two years are estimated at $655,000, licenses paid by insurance companies, $1,700,000, hunting licenses $1,063,487 and fees and licenses collected by the fish commission, $321,000.

Revenues of the state's numerous self-sustaining activities, other than those classified as revenue-raising, are estimated at $1,733,313. Of this amount $603,000 will be raised through forest patrol levies.

Oregon is at least to make a start toward a creditable agricultural exhibit at the San Francisco World's fair. The emergency board meeting here last week authorized the expenditure of $15,000 in the construction of a booth to house the agricultural display. Additional funds will be sought at the hands of the legislature with which to maintain the display during the fair.

Progress on the new state library

OWNERS OF "NOBLES" HAVE PRODUCT MADE BY NAME GIVER HIMSELF

The name of Noble wherever cowboys ride signifies highest quality in saddles, and it may be news to some of the proud possessors of these saddles who have not visited the local factory that it is not a pretentious streamlined, whistle-tooting concern of monstrous machines seething with hordes of sweating workers but a neat little two-man shop, a shop where E. G. Noble and Joe Snyder, two craftsmen of the old school, ply their trade unpretentiously but conscientiously. And though this factory has taken on some signs of streamlining of late, the owner of a "Noble" or "Heppner" saddle would be safe in gambling that every dot and flourish in the stamping, every stitch and rivet going into its assembly was placed there by the man whose name the saddle bears.

It is only when a considerable rush of orders or illness on the part of Mr. Noble makes it impossible for him to keep up with the slowing demand for horse millinery that the man whose name has been connected with fine saddles for more than half a century impresses his helper into the saddle making department. But even then it would take a practiced eye, indeed, to detect where is much more rapid than had been anticipated. Miss Harriett Long, state librarian, expects to begin moving into the new building about the middle of December. It is expected that two weeks time will be required to move the nearly 400,000 volumes to the new stacks, working crews in two shifts of eight hours each.

Dalles Prepares Big Welcome for E. O. Wheat League

The Dalles—Harry L. Brown, assistant secretary of agriculture, from Washington, D. C., Governor-elect Charles A. Sprague and Senator-elect Rufus Holman will be featured speakers on the program of the Eastern Oregon Wheat league here December 2 and 3, according to the program issued by officers of the league.

The coming of these state and national leaders, added to the previous list of important program events, makes certain, in the opinion of local committee members, that the convention here will be the largest in the eleven-year history of the league.

Brown is coming direct from Washington, D. C., to appear on the program, where he will discuss the relationship of the Pacific northwest wheat industry to the national wheat program. He will be heard Saturday forenoon and will also confer with committees in charge of drawing up reports on the national farm program. Sprague will be the principal banquet speaker Friday evening, while Holman is scheduled to speak on Saturday.

The Dalles business men have joined hands with Wasco county farmers in preparing an outstanding welcome and program of entertainment for the hundreds of wheat farmers expected at the convention. Leading business houses are preparing elaborate window displays emphasizing the wheat industry. An early morning boat trip around the harbor and docks has been arranged to explain the facilities being developed for joint rail, water and truck transportation. A comedy pageant featuring the building of the Bonneville dam is being prepared as an entertainment feature at the banquet.

Members of the committee in charge of local arrangements are Harold Sexton, sheriff; Emil Schano, vice-president of the wheat league; W. W. Lawrence, county agent; W. S. Nelson, secretary of The Dalles Chamber of Commerce; Charles Harth, William Ragsdale, Harry Ragsdale, and L. Wernmark.

one left off and the other began, for both Gene and Joe graduated from the same school, in fact spent many of their years together in the shop here, and each exemplifies the niceties of their period craftsmanship.

Such products of manufacture are becoming ever rarer in this highly mechanized age. Hence it is not strange that while Mr. Noble was finishing a saddle for a man up in Washington the other day another outside man, an official holding a substantial position with a large company, walked into the shop and inquired about having some leather shaving kits made. So it is that the type of craftsmanship that has made Noble saddles famous is bringing a demand for it in other leather articles.

Oh, yes, the streamlining process, you ask? Well, Gene and Joe moved into a new location a few months back and since have painted it inside and out. Joe just completed a piece of streamlined wood handiwork to increase capacity for window display and conveniences are being installed for patrons of the shoe repair department. Still, the cheerful big wood heater in back continues to be the spot where many gentry of the town assemble and discuss topics of the day.

to help work it through as well as possible.

COLLEGE RECEIVES WPA GRANT

Oregon State College—A number of campus improvements, including remodeling of the agricultural utilities building which was formerly the old dairy barn, removal of old sheds west of the campus, road grading and graveling, and additional landscaping, will be possible at OSC in the near future as the result of a $27,000 WPA grant just made to the college. The program also includes extension of the agricultural mall and construction of additional facilities for research in poultry diseases. As the program already has the approval of the state board of higher education, work will begin as soon as labor is available.

W. D. Neill was in the city Monday from the Butter creek farm.
