School News
By Jerrine Edwards
The school play, "The Blundering Herd," was presented by the student body on November 18, with a large crowd present. Skits from this play were given at Ione and Heppner on the afternoon preceding the presentation at Lexington. Miss Patricia Jewell spent the holidays at her home in Oregon City. An interesting program was given in the auditorium last Wednesday in honor of Thanksgiving. Numbers were presented by the grade school students after which athletic awards were given to those high school students who had earned them. Mr. and Mrs. Ladd Sherman spent the holidays in Portland. While there they saw the Oregon-Oregon State football game. The losers in the ticket sale for the play will give a party for the winners on Thursday evening. Mrs. Lillian Turner spent the holidays at her home in Heppner. Mrs. Edna Turner spent the holidays at her home south of Heppner. Mr. and Mrs. Dueltgen were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell on Thanksgiving day. Six weeks' tests were given last week, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, because there was no school on Thursday and Friday. Hot lunches were prepared last week by Edith Edwards and Delpha Jones, and this week by Mrs. Way. Born, to Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Baker at the Blackburn mill on Rhea creek, November 23, a 9-pound daughter.

Trashy Fallow Helps Germination
Differences in germination of wheat on summer fallows made in various ways have been noticeable in wheat fields this fall, according to the Morrow county agent. On fields where trash is unevenly spread the wheat came up quicker on the trashy areas than on relatively bare places in the same field. It is thought perhaps the carry-over of moisture in the trashy spots was closer to the surface and the early fall rain was sufficient to bring the moisture together, while on the bare spots there was still a layer of dry dirt between the new and old moisture.

EXAMINER HERE 8TH
