

Cow Killers Belatedly Report Organization Set-up for New Year

(Contributed)

The annual meeting of the Cow Killers club was held at Sunflower spring Saturday night, Nov. 19 on the eve of the closing of the elk season. The meeting was held for the purpose of electing officers and initiation of new members. F. B. Nickerson was re-elected president as there was no other member eligible for that position. Dr. McMurdo was put in as vice, and Owen Leathers was re-elected to his old office of secretary-treasurer, an office he has so efficiently filled. The new members taken in were Guy Chapin and Harley Leathers, old residents of Hardman.

Not long after the initiation ceremonies were over, Guy Chapin was elected to the office of judge supreme of the Cow Killers club. This was an open ceremony and those present besides the members were Lou Bisbee, Tom Beymer and Frank Stanley. Judge Chapin was chosen for this high and important office on account of his high qualifications and natural ability as a jurist. For those who are not acquainted with Judge Chapin, it may be fitting to describe him as a man of short stature and dark eyes which carry sharp twinkle strongly significant of his keen intellect. He wears a heavy black beard in the late fall and winter seasons but in the late spring and summer he keeps it neatly trimmed so at all times he is the personification of dignity. The judge has long been known for fairness in his decisions, rendered in a kind and deliberate manner which displays his judicial knowledge. It was these sterling qualifications which won for him this supreme office without one dissenting vote, and we are all proud to have such a distinguished member in our new organization.

The Cow Killers club was born on the last day of the elk season, 1937.

Granges Install Jointly at Rhea Creek

By BURTON H. PECK

Several members of Lexington and Lena granges met with Rhea Creek grange Friday evening. Bountiful dinner was served at 6:30 o'clock p. m., after which officers-elect of the several granges were installed into office by Mrs. Mary Lundell, county deputy. We commend Rhea Creek grange for their hospitality.

The ladies of Lexington grange gave a 6 o'clock dinner Saturday in the grange dining room, honoring past masters. Clarence Bauman, master-elect, presided as toastmaster. Amid mild revelry each master reviewed some of the growth and accomplishments resulting during his administration. The diners then assembled in the hall and listened to the following lecturer's program: Community singing, led by Mrs. Trina Parker; piano selection, Marsella Jackson; song by Burton Peck, accompanied on the guitar by Donald Peck; duet, E. Harvey Miller and Jesse Turner, with Mrs. Virginia Turner at the piano.

Grange then convened and C. J. D. Bauman, master-elect, and Anna Smouse, secretary-elect, were installed into office by Harvey Miller. Rev. C. F. Trimble was elected to membership. George Peck gave a report from the agricultural meeting held Saturday at Spokane, where delegates of the grange, Farm Bureau, Farmers Union and woolgrowers from Oregon, Washington and Idaho discussed agricultural program needful for the northwest and whose combined deliberation ultimately accepted the Eastern Oregon Wheat league program in its entirety, thus placing all northwest farm groups under a united program.

The Lexington juvenile grange, with Mrs. Norma Marquardt, juvenile matron, assembled Saturday evening in their new hall, which is a valuable acquisition recently added to the grange property.

Mrs. J. A. Anglin and father motored to Yakima the end of the week and returned Sunday after transacting business.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Hunt at the Sanford canyon farm home Tuesday morning, an 8-pound son.

COUNTY SCHOOL MEETING

quantity purchase of supplies and more adequate distribution of plants and equipment which the single district plan can effect, it was pointed out.

Because of the additional property that would be made available for special school taxing, and because of the economies that may be effected, a uniformly low special tax would prevail on all property in the county, it was emphasized from the standpoint of taxation.

All schools would have uniform qualifications, a point that any well trained superintendent would demand, said Mr. McAtee, thus assuring one-room schools the same type of teaching service that is available to city schools.

That voting to come under the county school law would not mean an immediate consolidation of schools was emphasized. The set-up calls for districting the county into five zones by the county court. One member from each zone is elected to the county school board which has complete supervisory powers. These members are elected for terms of from one to five years, so that each year one new member is elected, and an experienced board is maintained at all times after the organization gets under way.

Those districts where schools are maintained would still have their own advisory committees, set up as are the several district boards at present, three members in each district. These committees would have advisory powers only, to recommend improvements or changes, such as in teaching personnel, equipment, etc.

ADLERIKA

Final determination of policy, making of budgets, levying of taxes, selection of teachers, expenditures of all monies and all other administrative work would lie entirely in the hands of the county board.

How crook county has especially benefitted in one instance was cited by Mr. McAtee. That was in obtaining a musical director for all schools in the county, second in ability to none in the state. By spreading her services over the entire county and drawing on all the county for payment of salary, they were able to obtain this type of talent and retain it over a long period of years.

One point in the county school law plan of organization that the speaker did not recommend or condemn was the method of electing directors. While each zone nominates its own director, the entire county votes on the nominees' election. It might be that the zone whose position is to be filled should have sole power of election, it was intimated.
