- Smith Confirmation
- Social Security
- Bakeries Protest

By A. L. LINDBECK

Salem—Confirmation of the appointment of Edgar W. Smith of Portland as a member of the state board of higher education has provided the only controversial issue of the legislative session to date. Smith's confirmation is opposed by a number of senators. In fact the opposition claim 13 votes or more than enough to block confirmation, while Smith's supporters claim 23 votes or enough to confirm with at least three to spare.

When the question of Smith's confirmation came up during the first week of the session it was put over until Monday and made a special order of business. At that time instead of coming to a vote the matter was referred to a special committee of five members for further consideration.

Two objections are raised to Smith's confirmation. One of these is his membership on the milk control board. Several senators who otherwise will vote to confirm Smith's appointment have indicated that they will not support him unless and until he relinquishes his milk board post. The other objection is to Smith's activity in affairs of the University of Oregon. Partisans of the state college fear that their interests might be jeopardized by the presence of a university man on the board.

Governor Sprague in a special message to the House and Senate Monday called attention to objections raised by the federal Social Security board to Oregon's definition of labor disputes as set forth in the piking bill approved by the voters at the November election. In an effort to overcome this objection attorneys for the Unemployment Compensation commission have drafted an amendment to the compensation act in which they attempt to set up a definition of labor disputes in conformity with the requirements of the federal board but applicable only to the jobless insurance law. Attorneys for organized labor express themselves as entirely dissatisfied with the proposed amendments and members of the legislature who have studied the proposed amendment frankly admit that they do not know what its effect will be. In order to get the amendment under way, however, the senate committee on revision of law has agreed to bring it out in the form of a bill and then to hold a number of hearings on the subject before the lawmakers are asked to pass on the measure. T. Morris Dunne, chairman of the Oregon Unemployment compensation commission, told the senate committee Monday that unless the Oregon law was made to conform to the federal requirements his commission would be compelled to close all of its offices throughout Oregon on February 1 for lack of funds to pay administrative costs.

The Ellis-Wiperman bill to abolish the state bakery board has the bakery interests of the state up in arms. A public hearing on the measure has been scheduled for next Tuesday night in the hearing room of the new capitol.

Farmers and poultrymen might find themselves seriously handicapped in the shipment of chickens if a bill introduced by Senator Wallace should receive legislative approval. The measure would require a permit from the game commission in order to ship birds from one county to another. Chickens, it is explained, are classed as non-game birds.

Schools in Salem and North Bend will benefit from colorful school crossing warning signs which will guard intersections in the two cities. In North Bend the Kiwanis club president, George Bernges, has created some "Safety Maid" signs, while the Salem 20-30 club has donated seven "Safety Sally" signs to the school board for placement at intersections adjoining schools.

Latest gasoline consumption figures indicate that there will be almost exactly the same amount of travel on Oregon's highways this year as last. The first 10 months of 1938 showed an increase of about one million gallons over the same period last year, or about half of one per cent.
