Weed Control Work Pushed in County

Eight illustrated leaflets, first in a series dealing with perennial weeds found in Oregon, have just been issued as extension bulletins at Oregon State college, and are now ready for free distribution.

Each leaflet carries an accurate reproduction of one weed in various stages, such as the mature plant, the root system, leaves, blossom, and seeds. A description of each weed and its distribution in the state is discussed, as well as the latest recommendations on control methods. Weeds covered so far by the series are Canada thistle, white top, morning glory, quack grass, plantains, leafy spurge, Russian knapweed, and St. John's wort. All are written by Lawrence Jenkins and E. R. Jackman, extension specialists in farm crops.

A supply of these leaflets has been ordered by C. D. Conrad, county agent, and he is anxious that every one have copies.
