1939 Motor Cruise: To Yellowstone

On the Red Lodge highway: "Up, up, up we climbed, stopping here and there for scenic views and photographs."

This newspaper is co-operating with the Oregon State Motor association and The Oregonian to sponsor a series of motor cruises designed to stimulate travel throughout the Pacific northwest. The following article is condensed from a full-page article appearing in The Sunday Oregonian June 18.

One of the high points of the motorlog 3500-mile trip, sponsored by The Oregonian and the Oregon State Motor association and fathered by the Northwest Tourist association, the Spokane Chamber of Commerce and the Inland Empire Automobile association, through the wide expanses of the northwest was the journey into Yellowstone park over the Red Lodge highway. The highway is the new northeast entrance into the park.

Previously the motorlog party had sped from Portland through Washington to Spokane; into Idaho where copper, lead and silver mining operations were examined and on into Montana.

The Red Lodge highway is hung from precipitous mountain sides and crosses directly over the crest of the Beartooth mountain, 10,942 feet high, or approximately the summit of Mount Hood.

Red Lodge, Cooke City and Silver Gate, grown travel conscious because of the new road by their doors, were eager to instruct the travelers in the attractions of the region.

The highway, a magnificent piece of engineering, was taced by an Oregon man, Harry Mitchell, associate highway engineer for district 1, bureau of public roads with headquarters in Portland, and the natives of that region swear by his genius. At no place does the grade exceed 5 1/2 per cent and the average car in good mechanical repair does it nicely in high gear despite the altitude.

Rowena loops and the figure eight on the Columbia River highway would be dwarfed in comparison to these switchbacks. Up, up, up we climbed, stopping here and there for scenic views and photographs.

Snow-capped peaks presented chains of pearly and spectacular grandeur as far as the eye could see.

Dropping down from these dizzy heights, we observed a large log lodge near the highway which, we were told, is the seat of Princeton university's summer course in geology. Our scenic seminar had already convinced us that they had come to the right place.

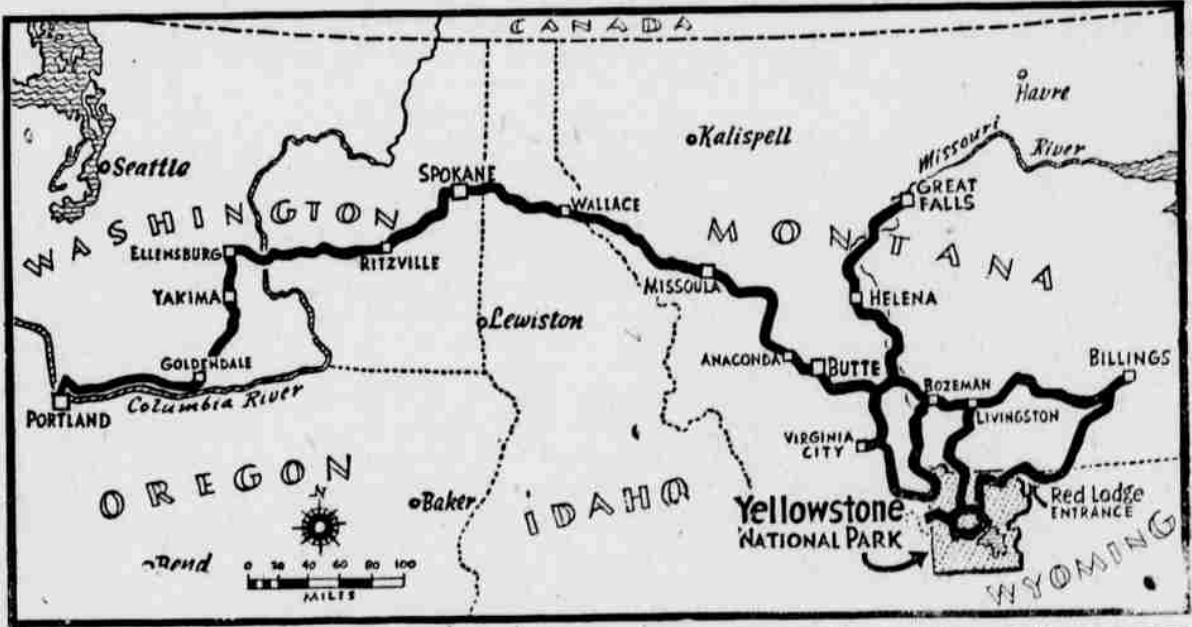

Here prehistoric seas and lakes, volcanic eruptions, lava flows, earthquakes, gigantic upheavals and creeping ice sheets have left a fascinating story which the geologist may enjoy to its fullest. Here also may be observed in Yellowstone vulcanism still alive and active. Thus the scientist may bridge the ages of the past.

The night was spent at West Yellowstone and the circuit of the park made next day. The bizarre natural phenomena of the park have been so well exploited as to need little detailing here. The geyser basin, of which Old Faithful geyser, the Morning Glory pool, Crystal pool, the paint pots and the like are central attractions, and the grand canyon of the Yellowstone remain the outstanding and never-tiring features of this astonishing area.

The highways have been widened from winding one-way dirt roads to two-way modern surfaced roads. Markings through the park are better and accommodations for the tourist at reasonable figures are available.

Our party will never forget its visit to the canyon, where we stood in awe, first at Artists' point and then at Inspiration point, and peered down into the depths of the varicolored chasm out by the Yellowstone river and at the surging Yellowstone falls at the upper end. Yellows, reds, browns, greys and greens make up the fantastic landscape and paint its myriad of minarets.

The Montana leg of the 3500-mile motorlog is mapped above, showing the location of the new Red Lodge highway.

OSC Band Adds 4th World Fair to Record

Oregon State College—The Oregon State college band, which made a trip to San Francisco the first week in June to participate in OSC day at the Treasure Island world fair, has now appeared at four world fairs, a record seldom equaled by any college musical organization, it is believed here.

The world fair visitations by the OSC band began in 1905, when the group played at the Lewis and Clark exposition in Portland, under the leadership of Frank Lucas. In the fall of 1905 Harry L. Beard was made leader of the band and four years later took the organization to Seattle where it played for a week at the Alaska-Yukon exposition. Still under the leadership of Captain Beard, the band in 1915 went to San Francisco for a two-week stay in the Oregon building at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The latest trip made by 60 men was again under the leadership of Captain Beard, who has just completed his 34th year as conductor of the band.

For the third consecutive year a course in safe driving will be offered members of the 4-H club summer session at Oregon State college this summer, starting June 6, it was announced by Earl Snell, secretary of state. The instruction is given as a part of the state-wide traffic safety campaign conducted by the secretary of state's office.

Garlic-Parsley an Aid In HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Medical reports say that Garlic-Parsley concentrate has a double action in reducing high blood pressure. First, it tends to relax tightened arteries. Second, it checks or inhibits decomposition of waste matter in the bowels, a contributory cause of high blood pressure. To get concentrated garlic and parsley in odorless, tasteless form, ask for ALLIMIN. These tablets, used at regular intervals, aid in reducing blood pressure and relieving headache and dizziness caused by excessively high readings. To learn what raises your blood pressure and for medical treatment consult your doctor. ALLIMIN is for sale by all druggists. Large box, 50c. Special economy size, $1.00.
