Orange Juice Retains Vitamin C Over Night

Orange juice held over night for use at breakfast may not taste as good as that freshly made, but it will have just about as much vitamin C content, says Lucy A. Case, nutrition specialist of the OSC extension service. In reviewing an experiment made by the U. S. bureau of home home economics, Miss Case points out that orange juice loses only about 10 per cent of its vitamin C content while stored 24 hours in a refrigerator.

After the first day of storage, there is a gradual loss of this vitamin, known scientifically as ascorbic acid. For the experiment, oranges were treated as they commonly are in the home. The juice was extracted on a glass reamer, the seeds removed with a wire strainer, and the juice stored in loosely covered containers in a refrigerator.

Although oranges and other citrus fruit contain some of the other vitamins and certain minerals, it is for their vitamin C that they are especially valued by nutritionists. This, the most easily destroyed of all the vitamins, is one in which diets are often low. It is needed every day because the body can store very little of it.

Those who choose to get their vitamin C from oranges and grapefruit, plentiful on the market recently, may count on getting a day's supply of it from half of a medium-sized grapefruit or one large, juicy orange.

Supplies of oranges and grapefruit this year have been the largest ever produced in this country. For this reason the secretary of agriculture has designated both of these fruits as surplus farm commodities.

Oregon Man to Speak On National Broadcast

Will Steen, chairman of the Oregon state AAA committee, will represent the western division of the Triple-A on a national broadcast from Washington, D. C., Tuesday, July 11. The program, to be heard in the west at 8:30 a. m. over station KEX, will deal with the general subject of "Agricultural Problems That Farmers Are Solving with the Help of the AAA." State committeemen from Kentucky, Georgia, Maine, and Ohio will report for their sections of the country.

Steen plans to explain a farm problem typical of the western division and tell what farmers, working thru the AAA, are doing to meet it. The broadcast will be a feature of the National Farm and Home hour and is made possible by the fact that state chairmen and state executive officers will be in Washington at that time for a conference to obtain farmer suggestions for the 1940 farm program.

N. C. Donaldson, state executive officer of Oregon stationed at Oregon State college, will be the other Oregon representative at the conference.

State Economic Picture Roseate

Washington, D. C. (Special to the Gazette Times from our Washington D. C. Bureau)—Here is the economic picture of Oregon as quoted by one of the gigantic lending agencies of the government:

Basic and general factors affecting real estate are strikingly favorable in Oregon. Rent-paying capacity is expanding; rentals are moving upward; relief load is lighter; costs of building lower; residential activity increased; farm income greater; bank debits expanded—last spring. Only discordant note is the increase in number of foreclosures. Employment and payrolls trend is steadily upward.

Seven drivers with physical defects were involved in traffic accidents during May, 1939, compared to ten such drivers during the month of May, 1938, Earl Snell, secretary of state, said today. Snell pointed out that in the interest of safety prospective drivers in this state are required by law to take tests in the event physical defects are present.

County Pomona Meets at Cecil

MARY LUNDELL, Reporter
Although fewer in numbers than in some previous Pomonas, the meeting at Cecil Saturday was unusually interesting and indeed enjoyable to those in attendance, and even though the season was a busy one, all granges in the county were represented.

Those having attended the state grange meeting held in Corvallis in June, reported the best attended and well handled conference held in recent years. Facilities on the campus and in the city are especially adapted for taking care of crowds as both the fraternity houses and homes in the city are prepared for housing students. Everyone was comfortably located with sufficient room for many more.

Business sessions, interspersed with singing and entertainment features were most agreeably and well organized as to time and place of committee meetings and reports.

The state session for 1940 will be held in Salem.

A resolution opposing the shipping of scrap iron and other war materials to Japan, stated briefly as follows, was endorsed by Pomona: Whereas, the Morrow County Pomona grange desires to promote peace among nations and condemns the shipping of such materials as may be manufactured into instruments to be used for the infliction of death and destruction upon innocent persons, and

Whereas, the cessation of such shipments would, in our judgment do much to prevent further suffering of millions of innocent non-combatants,

Be it resolved, that proper governmental and private authorities be urged to take such action as may be necessary to prohibit such shipments.

The following lecturer's program was presented: Song, "God Bless America," agricultural talk, "Weeds, Cutting and Curing Hay, World Wheat Situation," County Agent Conrad; accordion solo, Paul Rietmann; report 4-H summer school, Joan Wright; talk, "State Fair Singing Contest," Chas. Wicklander; piano solo, Marjorie Baker; agricultural slides, C. C. C. Supt. Kistner; lecture, Agronomist Parkins of Pendleton; talk, "Cost of Production," Mrs. McFarland; song, "Old Glory."

Pomona grange is sponsoring a contest among the subordinate granges beginning with the October meeting. Purpose of the contest is to stimulate a better attendance at Pomona meetings. A prize of $20.00 will be given the winning grange.

An organization of young folks including grange members between the ages of 14 and 35 has become widespread over the state, Y. G. A. groups appearing in at least three-fourths of the counties. Morrow county has not organized her young people, but is looking forward to Young Grangers of America groups in the near future.

The real purpose of the Y. G. A. is to supply a place of interest for the younger members, especially those who are just out of school and are missing the activities of school days.

We take this opportunity to thank the ladies of the Home Economics club who were responsible for the two delicious meals for Pomona meeting. We especially thank Mrs. Elsie Peterson and Mrs. Roxy Krebs who worked so faithfully, and their helpers.

The next Pomona meeting will be held in the Lexington hall with the Lexington grange as host. The date is October 7. At that time officers for the years 1940-41 will be elected. Willows grange will exemplify the degree of Pomona.

Salesmen apparently are sold on traffic safety, Earl Snell, secretary of state, said today. During May this year, salesmen were involved in 19 per cent less accidents than during the same month a year ago.

Eugene became the only city in Oregon to institute a "100 Deathless Days" contest in traffic safety this year, it was announced by Earl Snell, secretary of state, today. The contest there is being sponsored by a morning newspaper.
