PAUL McCARTY

The disastrous results of last Monday's dust, rain and hail storm is now common news but to one lower Eightmile farmer, the storm meant an extra trip to Lexington, a trip that meant a harvest was out of the question...this farmer, preparing for harvest, bought the necessary wheat sacks Monday morning at the neighboring town...after the storm Monday afternoon, this man's crop, the one he had for months worked on and anticipated harvesting, lay on the ground...Monday evening the farmer went back to Lexington and returned the sacks that he had planned to fill with wheat, the wheat that the cyclone destroyed in a few minutes.

Besides destroying many fields of wheat, the mentioned storm, in addition to tearing down poplar trees, knocked a locust tree through the top of the George York car at Lexington.

All plans for a smoker this Saturday have been cancelled, Sheriff Clarence Bauman, said yesterday... the boy the sheriff planned to use in the main event has been transferred east from the Squaw Creek CCC camp... a fight card on July 22 is almost certain, however.

Jesse Turner has at his office in the hotel building the smallest receiving set in Heppner... this little product uses no wires, aerials, nor antennas. Joe Green, fresh from a visit in Virginia, announced yesterday that he would supply all callers at Green's hardware with mint juleps... he guarantees these juleps as being truly southern in nature, as he brought the necessary ingredients for the mixture from Virginia. Hanson Hughes, local grocer, took the rail route to Portland Tuesday night.

The swimming pool will definitely open Saturday, July 15, at 2 p. m., as scheduled... finishing touches will not be completed at that time but the pool will open just the same... Doc Tibbles said the electric lights would not be hooked up right away to make night swimming available but that the pool would remain open in the evening as long as it is light, which means around 8 o'clock.

Next week the Rodeo association faces the difficult task of selecting a queen... one thing certain, the queen will not be one of the four attendants already named... the association undoubtedly has some possible candidates listed, but just who they are is not known.

$100,000 STORM RAKES WHEAT

Mrs. Nelson believed Monday's wind to have been the hardest they ever experienced.

Florence Dalzell and Tress McClintock fields on Dry Fork were believed to be total losses, while the Lawrence Jones place escaped with a narrow strip taken out of one field.

Algott Lundell expected to get seed and feed from the field he had hoped would yield 2000 sacks. A 30-acre field of beardless barley for which he had imported seed last fall was damaged 25 per cent, he believed.

August Anderson had a 120-acre field that promised to yield tops in the county. It was entirely cleaned. Milton Morgan was cleaned of 500 acres; expected partial return on another 170-acre field. His neighbor, Lonnie McCabe, expected to salvage seed and feed from 500 acres.

Three hundred sacks were harvested the first day of operation on the Leonard Carlson farm, Monday. The afternoon storm just about took the rest of 200 acres. Emil Carlson lost all of 500 acres.

Oscar Peterson had already lost by drouth a field of early fall planting that lay in the storm's path, and the storm took the remainder, 240 acres of promising wheat, from which he had harvested but 80 sacks.

The Walter Dobyms, Henry Peterson, Henry Baker, and Charless McElligott farms, lying along the edge of the storm appeared not to have been badly damaged, though these and a large number of other farms that were struck by heavy wind may sustain losses from shattering that only the harvesting will tell.

The only considerable fall of water indicated was that which ran into Dry Fork canyon. At the Dry Fork school where the new county road crosses the canyon an embankment of water 15 feet high was reported by Bob Grabill, manager of the local Braden-Bell store, who was at the Ed Rietmann farm near by. He and Mr. Rietmann were attracted by the roar of the large rocks being moved by the water and witnessed the deluge which took the new road out where the fill was made to cross the canyon. Silt several feet deep was deposited in the road where it dips into the canyon and crossing was not possible Tuesday, though the county court sent workmen to repair the damage that afternoon.

Laxton McMurray, pioneer, said Monday's storm deviated its path somewhat from that usually followed by storms that have struck his place at intervals in years past. Gooseberry residents reported the storm the worst that had struck there since 1912.

A break came his way, Mr. McMurray said, as he had just finished cutting 150 sacks of fine barley that lay in the storm's path.

come up, said it was clear and sultry, with hardly a breath of air for an hour or so before. Then the big black cloud was seen rolling out of the southwest. A heavy wind preceded its arrival, and as it blotted out the sun, the day darkened into deep night. A heavy roar was heard a few minutes before it struck. When it struck, houses shook as if they were going to be carried away. One man who sought refuge in the tractor declared that had it not been for the heavy safety glass, he was sure it would have been shattered. Another man, also in a tractor cab, said he was sure the cab was rocked two or three inches back and forth. One man was reported to have been slashed on the head by the hail. Chickens were said to have emerged with black eyes; were blown helter, skelter.
