OLD HUNTING GANG REPEATS

It's just taken for granted that when a certain gang of Heppner hunters go to the timber they never come back empty handed. This year was no exception as "Captain" Ed Bennett, "Killer" Sag Bisbee, "Chief Cook" Charlie Cox, "Packer" Luke Bibby, "Assistant Cook" Gene Ferguson and "Dish Washer" Dave Wilson returned the first of the week from their hunt in the high mountains. Each had his quota of buck. The titles are those assigned by the gentlemen themselves, indicating their usefulness around camp, and probably have special significance to those "in the know." Anyway, all report a happy occasion which would have been perfect but for Mr. Cox, the postmaster, acquiring a distressing attack of tonsillitis which kept him confined to camp for a couple of days. In spite of the tonsillitis, Charlie wouldn't be kept down and filled his cooking assignment despite objection of his fellows, say reports. Bisbee is credited with slaying a nice 69-pound buck, reporting at camp that "there was a nice small one with him but he got away."
