FISH PROGRAM SLATED

An elaborate program for protection, maintenance and development of the fish runs in Columbia, Willamette and their tributaries has been outlined by the bureau of fisheries, cooperating with fish commissions of Oregon and Washington, but no appropriation will be made when congress meets. The director of the bureau explains that he cannot make an estimate to embody in the budget the president submits to congress January 4 because no data have been presented by the fisheries bureau.

At the bureau of fisheries it is said that a very complete and thorough investigation is being conducted on all the streams involved and that this survey will not be completed before next summer making it impossible to ask the budget director for an estimated appropriation before the fiscal year 1942, which begins July 1, 1941. The rivers have been studied repeatedly in the past and there is an abundance of material which would indicate where cultural fish stations could or should be located, but the bureau is covering the subject again.

Seeds Burned-Over Land as Erosion Test

Test seedings of grass on representative burned-over land in Tillamook and Clatsop counties have been made by the Soil Conservation service to measure the effectiveness of new grass coverage in preventing erosion outbreaks after fire has removed the original cover, it is announced by Ivan C. DeArmond, area conservationist stationed at Corvallis.

Seeding in Clatsop and Tillamook counties was carried out with the cooperation of the respective county agricultural agents, who have been active in encouraging the reseeding of burned-over land. This activity is part of some experimental work being planned this year by the Soil Conservation service to determine the degree of erosion which may result from exposure of barren, burned over soil to wind and water.

Regional Conservator J. H. Christ has announced that plans are being studied for extending practical aid in the reseeding of burned-over areas. A committee is working on means of establishing special machinery for meeting emergency needs of this nature in the Pacific northwest, and the possible classification of burned-over land for future seeding.

ECHO PIONEER PASSES

Mrs. Antone Vey, 83, who settled in the Butter creek district shortly after marriage to Mr. Vey 47 years ago, resident of Pendleton for the last 36 years, and mother of Antone Vey, Jr., past Heppner Rodeo director and performer, died at her Pendleton home Sunday afternoon. Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Catholic church in Pendleton, Tuesday morning. Mrs. Vey was noted for her knowledge of the livestock business. Besides the son, she is survived by two daughters, the Misses Mamie and Anna Vey, both of Pendleton. Mrs. Vey was a native of the Azore islands, coming to the United States in her youth.

Eighty-one per cent of the 3,030 traffic accidents in Oregon during the month of October consisted of two-car crashes, statistics compiled by Earl Snell, secretary of state, revealed today. There were 2,471 such mishaps. Accidents involving three cars totaled 106.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Swanson of Ione were calling in the city Tuesday.

Hot Lunches for School Children Draw Interest

"Community responsibility for the food needs of children is greatly increasing in Oregon, says Miss Lucy A. Case, extension specialist in nutrition at Oregon State college. "However, a large task still remains in providing hot nourishing food for children who are obliged to remain at school for lunch."

Returned questionnaires from 145 Oregon high schools in the state indicate that only 48 per cent of the high schools provide any facilities for serving lunches to their students. Of these, 72 per cent have cafeterias, 4 per cent serve plate lunches, and 24 per cent serve one hot dish a day to supplement the lunches brot from home, according to a study made this year by Miss Vivian Roberts of the school of home economics at Oregon State college.

School-lunch projects are getting off to a better start this fall. Some of the projects are using the food supplied by the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation. And everywhere the emphasis is on the "protective" foods, the survey shows.

"To grow vigorously and develop strong bones and sound teeth, children need milk, eggs, fresh meats such as liver rich in vitamins and iron, fruits, vegetables, and whole-grain cereals," Miss Case adds.

"It's surprising, too, what a difference just one hot dish makes on the school lunch menu. The children study better in the afternoon and get better grades. They gain in weight. They don't have so many colds, or have to stay at home so much for sickness. The school-lunch project brings quick results now, and it certainly builds for the future."

Good teamwork between local, state and federal agencies is necessary where FSCC foods are used. The surplus corporation furnishes food only after local plans are laid for cooking and serving the lunches to children certified as eligible for free lunches. Oftentimes a dozen or more civic and welfare agencies join in working out details of management and financial support.
