Oregon Leads in Seed Crop Yield in USDA Reports

Oregon's leading position in the production of many field crop seeds is emphasized in the current federal crop report summarizing agricultural production in the United States for 1939, says G. R. Hyslop, head of the division of plant industries at Oregon State college. These official figures for 1939 showed Oregon with the highest yield per acre of alsike clover among all the commercial seed production states in the country. Oregon also compared well in red clover and alfalfa seed production.

Average yield of alsike clover seed in Oregon was 5.7 bushels in 1939, which is 1.2 bushels per acre more than the production in Idaho and from two to five times the acre production in the other commercial states. In 1938 Idaho alone exceeded the Oregon average yield. In total production of alsike clover seed Oregon has exceeded all other states for the past two years and is credited with 89,000 bushels or 5,340,000 pounds in 1939.

Oregon also occupies an enviable position in red clover seed production, says Hyslop, having the third highest yield per acre among the states during the past two years, being exceeded in yield per acre only by Washington and Idaho. Oregon average for 1939 was 3 bushels an acre with a total production of 49,000 bushels or 2,940,000 pounds. This places Oregon clover seed production at a little over 8,250,000 pounds with a value in excess of $1,250,000.

Alfalfa seed production is important in Oregon which is one of the high yielding states. Total yield, however, is slightly below that of last year while the dry season east of the Rocky mountains has resulted in a much larger yield of seed there than heretofore. This climatic condition tended to influence not only the yield per acre but the acreage that was saved for seed purposes.

Larger acreages of alfalfa and red and alsike clover are expected in Oregon for 1940. With the prospects of nearly double the plantings of hairy vetch and winter peas, the seed business in Oregon should be a good one for 1941, Hyslop predicted.

Storm in Gorge Disrupts Service

Heavy weather accompanied by freezing temperature caused breakdown in electric service Monday and a general interruption of New Year observance in this district. Rainfall in the Columbia gorge between The Dalles and Hood River was congealed into ice as it fell, causing a heavy load to accumulate on poles of the Pacific Power and Light company with the result that several poles were broken.

Service was cut off in Heppner at about 2:20 p. m. Monday and was not restored until after 1 a. m. Tuesday. Inconvenience was felt by many householders and those businesses in operation on the holiday.

An effort was made to energize the line about 10:30 o'clock Monday night and might have succeeded but for another break in the circuit. The so-called silver thaw is one of the worst types of weather the power lines have to deal with, according to company officials, and while every precaution is taken against such contingencies, no type of construction has been devised to cope with nature in some of her most playful moods.
