Tractor Takes "Nose Dive" Into Cavern

By MRS. ELMER GRIFFITH

Although not an aviator, Donald Heliker struck an "air pocket" while plowing on the Willow creek farm Thursday afternoon and took a "nose dive" which ended with the tractor at the bottom of a hole, so deep that the top of the cab was even with the top of the ground. The accident happened near the bank of the creek and it is thought the ground had been undermined by beaver. Donald was not injured, and owing to the fact that there was a long hitch on the plows, they were not jerked onto the tractor, so no damage was done, except that it required nearly half a day's work by four men to get the tractor on level ground again.

Seek Immunization From Diphtheria

Parents may have no fear of diphtheria among their children if the proper steps are taken, says Lucille H. Vale, Morrow county health nurse. Take them to your doctor and ask to have them protected against the disease, she advises. Children may be immunized as early as six months of age.

Six months after the immunization, take your children back to the doctor to have the Schick test. This will determine whether your children have sufficient treatment to protect them from diphtheria.
