'Don't Darken My Door' Slated for 5th

The junior-senior classes of Lexington high school are presenting their version of a hilarious time in the three-act comedy by Anne Coulter Martens, "Don't Darken My Door." The curtain will open for this play Friday, April 5, at 8 o'clock in the school's auditorium.

The story is placed in a country gentleman's home and the plot weaves an exceedingly humorous design around the life of a "romance" crazed set of young and old maids versus a confirmed bachelor and his support of bewildered males. From first curtain until the last fun and laughter predominate the entire action.

The cast and entire production staff have everyone of the high school upper classmen at work and for the first time in several years a play will be presented in a newly made set which, in itself, the staff maintains is quite an attraction. The Lexington players are showing fine work in their practices and the play promises to be as good as it is funny.
