Recruiting Reveals Defense Energy

Expansion of the army and navy recruiting quotas in the Portland area brings the new national emergency closer home to Oregon people. The quota of 60 recruits assigned the Portland naval recruiting district for the month of June has been increased to 100. This large quota has been exceeded only once during the period since the president declared a "limited national emergency" last September. Local waiting lists have been entirely depleted and men now applying are usually accepted within 30 days from the date of application.

The United States army recruiting office in the Pendleton post office building is again open on a full time schedule, announces Lieutenant Colonel H. D. Bagnall, Portland recruiting officer. Vacancies under "Preparedness Requisition No. 1" call for heavy enlistments to be made for field artillery, signal corps, ordnance department and quartermaster corps for a number of army posts and camps in the west. Unmarried citizens, between 18 and 35, physically fit, of good character, normal intelligence and with no dependents, are being accepted.

"I WAS A WRECK!"

I just collapsed and started to cry. I wanted to be such a good wife, but..."

"That hot kitchen... was just too much for me. The summer heat was bad enough, but my old red-hot cook stove made cooking unbearable. And that wasn't all... I had to carry in fuel, light the fire, and clean up the soot and grime."

"Cool electric cooking was my salvation. That beautiful new electric range of mine cooks the food—not me. No more carrying in fuel, either. And, of course, there's no mess to clean up, for electric cooking is as clean as electric light!"
