

Adjustment Affects Wheat Grades

More careful adjustment of combines for this year's wheat harvest in eastern Oregon will pay big dividends in higher prices received for the grain, judging from reports from the grain inspection service at Portland. It seems that a large percentage of the grain from the Columbia basin is graded down because of M. E. O. G., as called by the inspection service. These initials stand for "material existing other than grain," or, in even plainer language, cobs, chaff, and other matter left in because of poor cleaning when wheat is separated.

The speed with which money can be lost is indicated by the fact that much of the grain received at Portland contains from 2 to 3 per cent M. E. O. G. Only one-half of 1 per cent is allowed for No. 1 grade, 1 per cent for No. 2 grade, and 2 per cent for No. 3. Where the grain is reduced to No. 3 because of excess M. E. O. G., the price is reduced two cents per bushel.

Ordinarily a little less cylinder speed and use of a little more air will eliminate the difficulty, according to those who discussed the situation at the last meeting of the Eastern Oregon Wheat league. Fairly low cylinder speeds are also favorable for another reason when threshing Rex wheat, as it is inclined to crack considerably when threshed at high cylinder speeds.

Straw Scattering Expected to Increase

Straw scattering after combines by use of special scattering attachments will be more prevalent this year than ever before throughout the Columbia basin, according to extension and soil conservation service men in that area. The attachments scatter the straw evenly behind the combines and make it possible to work the straw back into the soil by the trashy fallow method. The trashy fallow, in turn, prevents most wind and water erosion and helps preserve moisture and plant food for succeeding crops.

Some operators object to the scattering attachments because they cause some extra dust and dirt. Others say this is a small price to pay for the advantage of holding the soil on the field the rest of the year and returning material to the soil which, in actual volume of plant food elements, ranks almost equal to barnyard manure.
