Salem.—An additional 1584 recruits will be needed to bring Oregon's national guard units up to full peace time strength.

This was revealed by records of the adjutant general office here following unofficial but apparently reliable reports that the guard would be put on a peace time footing immediately following its mobilization into the regular army, tentatively set for September 16.

At the present time there are 4567 officers and men in the Oregon guard contingents. These include the 162d and 186th infantry regiments, the 218th field artillery regiment, the 249th coast artillery corps, the Lebanon company of the 116th medical regiment and the headquarters companies and detachments of the 41st division and 82d brigade.

It is understood here that there will be a period of ten days between actual mobilization of the guard and the departure of the units from their home stations for camp at Fort Lewis. This time will be allowed the men to set their private affairs in order for their extended absence from home. During this waiting period also efforts will be made to bring the various units up to peace strength by intensive recruiting drives in the various cities in which guard organizations are located.

Supporters of the candidacy of Dean Walker for the presidency of the state senate are now claiming that the veteran Polk county legislator has enough votes pledged to assure his election. The only other candidate for this post so far is Senator Douglas McKay of Marion county.

Reargument of the highly controversial anti-picketing case before the state supreme court has been scheduled for early October when it is expected that all seven justices will sit in on the arguments. When the case was argued before the high court several months ago two members were absent, Justice Bean being ill and Justice Bailey being absent from the state.

Accumulated profits from the state's liquor monopoly permitted of the retirement of $400,000 of the liquor certificates which had previously been issued to keep the state relief budget on a cash basis, State Treasurer Pearson announced. This leaves only $100,000 of the certificates still outstanding but retirement of the certificates has left the relief cupboard bare again so that it will be necessary to float another loan immediately, Pearson explained.

State Budget Director Eccles has found it necessary to warn the management of the Oregon exhibit at the San Francisco fair against unauthorized expenditures. In a letter to Mrs. Mabelle Marble, manager of the state's exhibit, Eccles declared that he is "greatly concerned" over the condition of the exhibit's finances and warned that in the future no expenditures should be made unless first approved by the World's Fair commission.

Members of the Oregon State Board of Control made a flying trip to Lake county Saturday.

Boarding a plane at the Salem airport Saturday morning the official party made the 300 mile hop to Lake county, attended to their business, took in the Lakeview round-up and were back in the capital that night.

Business that took the board members to Lake county was the inspection of 10,000 acres of swamp land the state owns in south Warner Lake. The board also visited the ranch of William Kittredge, Lake county stockman, who has reclaimed some 4000 acres of land similar to that owned by the state and which is now in a state of high productivity. Kittredge has proposed to lease the state lands which he would also reclaim and the board is understood

Ellis Says Sheep Industry Threatened

"Inequalities in AAA which are moving eastern Oregon's sheep population to farm flocks in the middle west must be ironed out," declared Senator Rex Ellis, republican nominee for congress, when in Heppner Tuesday. "I find an alarmed bunch of large sheep operators in this section who can see finish written to their operations—operations that are bearing a big share of the local tax burden—unless something is done about it."

Senator Ellis said the provision in AAA that pays middle western farmers for taking land out of corn production and for putting in forage crops is resulting in those farmers going into sheep breeding where before they did only feeding. The result has been the moving of the center of sheep population eastward, much to the economic insecurity of eastern Oregon counties where the income from sheep has been very important. The senator promised he would do all in his power to protect eastern Oregon's large sheep industry if he is elected in November.

Senator Ellis spent the day here visiting prospective supporters in November, and gave an insight into his legislative record at the Tuesday Lions luncheon.

NEWLYWEDS RETURN

Mr. and Mrs. James Driscoll returned home Saturday evening from their wedding trip and are making their home in the Wells apartment house on Gale street.

to be giving his proposition serious consideration.

Board members making the trip included Governor Charles A. Sprague, Secretary of State Earl Snell, State Treasurer Walter A. Pearson, and Louis Griffith, clerk.

There is still a lot of room for improvement in Oregon's public school system in the opinion of Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction. Many of the state's 979 one-room schools could be consolidated to the advantage of both the taxpayers who support these institutions and the pupils who attend them, Putnam said. Putnam also favors a re-vamping of the method by which education in this state is supported in order to equalize the financial burden.

The 74 law-school graduates who successfully passed the bar examination held here this summer are to appear before the supreme court to take the oath of office as attorneys on September 20.

Board or control members are scrutinizing biennial budgets of the several state institutions. Particular attention is being given by the board to building needs of the several institutions. While most of the building requests are admittedly meritorious, state finances will not permit of the construction of all needed buildings during the next biennium. It will be up to the board, therefore, to pass upon the various requests and decide which shall have priority before the budgets are submitted to the legislature when it convenes in January.

A flagpole for the new capital is nearing materialization. Designs for this improvement were placed before the board of control this week. When the board makes up its mind as to the type of pole to be erected the improvement will be financed out of unexpended funds in the appropriation for the state library.

Events other than strictly state business have been occupying much of the time of high state officials during the past month. First there was the Salem Centennial in which a number of officials appeared as participants in the governor's ball. These included Governor Sprague, Secretary of State Snell, State Treasurer Pearson, Justices Rossman and Kelly of the supreme court and others. Then came the notification ceremonies for Senator Charles L. McNary last week with another call upon the time of officialdom. This week it was the state fair with its two holidays—Labor Day (Monday) and Salem Day (Wednesday) to again cut in on the regular routine.

Cow Elk Tags Go Quickly for Season

All cow elk tags, authorized for issuance by the Oregon State Game commission, have been sold. Inasmuch as practically every newspaper in the state carried at least one story and many two stories on the cow elk tag sale, sportsmen were given ample notice. The cow elk season extends from November 1 to 16, both dates inclusive.

A limited supply of antelope tags are still available, and hunters planning to indulge in antelope shooting should make applications to the Portland office of the commission at once for the antelope tags.

The antelope season is from September 29 to October 6, both dates inclusive, and the territory open to antelope hunting includes portions of Lake, Malheur and Harney counties.
