

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—When men between 21 and 35 years register under the selective service act on October 16, it is estimated that 333,300 will be registered in the Pacific northwest; 207,000 in Washington and 126,300 in Oregon. The estimate (unofficial) is that there will be eligible for immediate service 69,000 in Washington and 42,100 in Oregon.

However, these 111,100 expected to be immediately available will not be called to the colors—thousands of them never will be. The quota for the two states will be about 5,000 for Washington and 3,050 for Oregon. In the first call only about 950 will be conscripted in Washington and 580 in Oregon. The quota is to be filled between November and January.

War department wishes to be as lenient as possible with married men within the conscription age, the desire being to disrupt family life as little as possible. What constitutes "dependents" will be one of the knotty questions, but the local boards are expected to use common sense. Considerable newspaper attention has been given to a rush of young men to marry in order to escape the draft. The number of such cases has been exaggerated. It appears, however, that unless a man was married before the precise minute that the president signed the bill making it a law, he can not claim exemption or deferred status on account of his matrimonial state. Frequently the statement is made that this is the first time a draft has ever been applied in the United States in peace time. That statement is incorrect. For many years, prior to the war between the states, every male citizen was subject to military service and each had to furnish his own equipment, rifle, powder and ball, or if he was in the cavalry, his own horse and outfit.

The draft machinery is not being put in motion at as early a date as the war department originally proposed. This was, in part, due to the refusal of congress to be stampeded. Because of the delay it has been impossible to expand housing facilities for the mobilized national guard and the draftees, and the war department has assured the public that no soldiers will be called into training until there is shelter, clothing and blankets for all. For this reason the concentration at Fort Lewis, Wash., will not attain its maximum until early next year, as at least three months will be required to construct the hundreds (901) of buildings at that place. The new buildings being rushed at the various camps will not be the tar paper affairs thrown together for the cantonments of the first world war. The new buildings will be semi-permanent, as military training henceforth is to be an established policy in the United States. Every school boy now 16 years of age will be subject to the draft under the present program when he attains his majority. The present program is for five years.

Political pressure has prevented a new industry from locating in the Columbia basin area. The Reynolds Metal company was giving serious thought to establishing itself in the northwest and taking Bonneville power for an aluminum plant. The company received a loan of $15,000,000 from RFC for the enterprise. Jesse Jones, who dictates the loans of RFC, is a southern democrat and has a finger in many industries in the south. Southern senators did not want the industry to go to the Columbia basin area. Upshot is that Reynolds company has taken 25,000 kw. from TVA, although power resources of that government enterprise are almost exhausted and steam

Conditioning Unit Is Huge Affair

Oregon State College.—Hereafter when Oregon State parents or other visitors attend one of the many large banquets held in the Memorial Union banquet and ballroom, they will be in air-conditioned surroundings equal to anything found in the state. In connection with the completion of the lower floor of the Memorial Union building, an air-conditioning unit is being installed which will automatically maintain the desired temperature and humidity levels, regardless of outside conditions.

A fan eight feet long, four feet wide, and 12 feet high, will deliver enough air to ventilate satisfactorily a 25-room school. This extra capacity is needed for large events where more than a thousand persons will be in the connected rooms. At such times the air-conditioning apparatus can take approximately 500 pounds of water per hour out of the air to keep the humidity at comfortable levels.

The improvement is part of the campus building program financed from building fee payments rather than tax funds.

More Students Set New Record at OSC

Oregon State College.—A heavy influx of new students, particularly women, has brought a 2 per cent increase in fall term registration at Oregon State college, which will reach a new record term total of about 4700 when the late registration is completed.

An 11 per cent increase in new students was shown, with 1862 enrolled at the end of the first week compared with 1682 at the corresponding time a year ago. Old students were off slightly, with a total of 2664 compared to 2746 last year. Enrollment of women was 6 per cent ahead of last year, and, with more than 1600 now registered, the co-ed student body is the largest in history. All classes are larger than last year with the exception of the senior class. Among the different schools, engineering led with 1077 at the end of the first week, followed in order by home economics, agriculture, secretarial science, science, forestry, education and pharmacy.

plants are being constructed to furnish power. No steam plants are required in the northwest, where there is an inexhaustible supply of falling water.

Communities throughout the nation, as well as in Oregon and Washington, have been hopped up over press reports that the government plans building airports in their vicinity. The press stories were based on a survey made by the civil aeronautics authority and, as CAA notified the appropriations committee, meant nothing at all—the survey merely indicated where airports and landing fields could be located. CAA does intend providing more ports for flying, but the appropriation it received was only $30,000,000, which is only a drop in the bucket inasmuch as modern airports cost anywhere from $2,000,000 up. A half billion dollars would be required to finance only a part of the possible airports mentioned in the survey.

Washington's Senator Homer T. Bone has been in Walter Reed hospital in the national capital for several weeks. The senator, who feels very deeply on the question of war and is an isolationist advocate, is upset by the evident drift of the United States toward the brink. Mr. Roosevelt has directed his inner circle advisers to ignore the Democratic national committee and to organize "liberals" to look after his campaign. The biggest sensation of the year is the sabotage going on to handicap national defense by "fifth columnists." It is affecting sea, land and air. Officials who know the facts hesitate to make the full story public.
