WE'VE GOT SOME QUESTIONS

TO ASK YOU ...

"You serve 12,000 farms?

Everyone knows that it takes more poles and wire to serve scattered farms than it does to deliver electricity in a city where you have a customer every 50 feet or so. I'd like to know how you manage to make ends meet when so much of your business is spread out thin?"

"You've paid $10,000,000 taxes?

I've heard that Pacific Power & Light Company has paid more than $10,000,000 in taxes since 1910. How can you do this and still have rates that compare favorably with a whole lot of tax-free public power systems?"

"And yet your rates are 37% below national average?"

. run by an up-and-coming organization I'm proud to belong to. It's true that Pacific Power & Light Company operates mostly in small towns and out in the country, and that it carries a whale of a big tax load. But you see, our system is like a diversified farm. We serve a lot of different types of electric users, and a variety of seasonal business, in 21 different counties in Washington and Oregon. That means pretty steady sales of electricity the year 'round for the system as a whole, even though it's up and down in any one locality.

"Another thing, our Company has a big enough business to keep a competent and experienced staff of fulltime engineers and managers busy all the time, and yet it's not too big to take a personal interest in your particular problems. Also, we've got the kind of a marketing organization that keeps building up electricity sales. so we can keep reducing the cost of each kilowatthour to you.

"What it boils down to is this: Pacific Power & Light Company does an all-around good job at low-cost because it's a successful American enterprise. And in this country, business success means giving the consumer REAL VALUE for every dollar."
