LEGISLATORS PAY TO END STATEHOUSE, Salem, Feb. 20.

Tomorrow, February 21, marks the end of the so-called regular session of 40 days. From now on until adjournment sine die the legislators will work for glory, and no pay. Nearly every indication is for a 60-day session. Wednesday saw one of the most controversial bills in either house up for debate—the "big truck" bill, which is now being lambasted all over the senate. The political dopesters say it will pass.

All of the so-called hot bills are still in committee. Old-age assistance, small loans, state civil service, sales tax, unemployment insurance, wine, and the reapportionment measures are resting in the arms of Morpheus. However, they are scheduled to awake with a bang the latter part of this week or soon thereafter. Then the fireworks will start. This very quiet session promises to wind up in a blaze of glory—or something.
