WILLOWS GRANGE NEWS

By MARY LUNDELL
Although the plays failed to arrive in time for the members of the FFA to memorize their parts, and had to be omitted, an interesting program was presented during the lecture hour to a large audience at the Willows grange meeting Saturday evening. Numbers included music by Future Farmers band; vocal solo with guitar, Donald Heliker, "Little Green Valley"; speech, "Why I Want to be an American Farmer," Van Rietmann; speech "Methods of Selecting Alfalfa Hay," Snell Weatherford; vocal duet, guitar and banjo accompaniment, Roy and Frank Johnson, "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine," "The Yellow Rose of Texas." Judging speeches were Marjorie Baker, Gladys Ely and Marjorie Gordon. The decision went to Van Rietmann who will represent the Arlington chapter in the Future Farmers contest in Heppner later in the month.

The program given last Saturday night was a requirement in their work and speaks very well for their various activities.

At the end of the evening the boys surprised the membership by turning their share of the door receipts back to the grange. The grange thanks you, boys.

On Sunday about 35 persons enjoyed the pot-luck dinner after which the officers practiced for degree work. There are about ten candidates for initiation on March 15.

The next meeting of the Home Economics club will be held at the home of Marjorie Gordon on Friday, March 21.

Washington Revealed as Conservationist

If George Washington were alive today, he probably would be one of the active leaders in the present revived interest in soil conservation and erosion control, say those who have been studying his writings on agricultural matters.

J. H. Christ, regional head of the Soil Conservation service in the Pacific northwest, points out in connection with the observance of Washington's birthday that this country's first president was an active and enthusiastic farmer who once said that "I know of no pursuit in which more real important services can be rendered to any country than by improving its agriculture..."

Agricultural writings of George Washington, collected and edited by W. E. Brook, reveal that Washington was probably the first planter in Virginia to change from the wasteful soil depleting one-crop system. Virginians in his day grew tobacco year after year, sometimes following it with Indian corn. At Mt. Vernon tobacco was once the main crop, but it gradually decreased in importance giving place to wheat and other grains as well as to potatoes, carrots, flax and hemp grown for home use.

If Washington were here today, Christ believes he would, as a lover of land, be a leader in an aroused public consciousness that has in the past few years swung the pendulum from exploitation to conservation all across the country from his native Virginia to the Pacific northwest.
