Big Wheat Surplus Looms Says Report

Latest crop reports on the condition of winter wheat in America emphasizes the necessity of a vote on wheat marketing quotas, according to Will Steen, chairman of the Oregon AAA committee.

The April crop report indicates that spring and winter wheat production plus the present carry-over will add up to nearly 1 1/4 billion bushels. This is about twice as much wheat as America normally consumes in two years. Other great wheat-producing countries also report big surpluses of unsold wheat, making the export outlook dark even without considering the war conditions which have cut off practically all chance of shipping wheat to countries which could use it.

The final proclamation of marketing quotas must be made prior to May 15, and will probably follow the May crop report. Already the tentative date for such a referendum if called for has been set for May 31. If the quotas are proclaimed and approved by growers, all farmers can sell all the wheat grown on their AAA acreage allotments. In other words, AAA cooperators will have nothing to worry about under the wheat quota system.

Farmers who have overplanted their allotments will have to store the excess or pay a penalty on it. Marketing quotas are a guarantee that all wheat growers will share in taking care of the surplus, says Chairman Steen.

National figures show that wheat growers are cooperating well with the wheat adjustment program. The indicated acreage this year will be somewhat less than 63 1/2 million acres, which is remarkably close to the total acreage allotment of 62 million acres. The heavy prospective surplus has been brought about by the stoppage of practically all exports following several favorable production years.

Irrigation Water Prospects Varied Throughout State

Irrigation water prospects in Oregon which appeared generally favorable two months ago had become highly variable by the time the final forecasts were made the first week in April, according to reports issued by R. A. Work, Medford, in charge of snow surveys and irrigation water forecasts for the Soil Conservation Service and O. S. C. experiment station.

Little or no snow was added to watersheds during February and March in most sections. While most soils on watersheds as well as in farming areas are still well soaked from heavy fall and early winter rains, irrigation water from stream flow and reservoir supplies will be critically short in some sections though amply in others.

The series of forecast meetings just completed revealed that shortages of greater or less extent will exist this year in the region from Deschutes county north to the Columbia and east to the Blue mountains. Full reservoirs and good stream flow characterize the territory from there east through Wall-owa, Baker and Malheur counties and along the southeast and south central section with minor exceptions. Southern Oregon west of the Cascades will have some local water problems again this year.

Probably the most critical situation was reported from the Milton-Freewater district where failure of the Walla Walla river to reach its usual high stage left the surrounding ground storage unreplenished. Hundreds of irrigation wells are expected to be dry or extremely low this summer. Steps to conserve early moisture have been recommended. The large Owyhee and Vale projects, on the other hand, are starting the season under exceptionally favorable condition with enough water in storage for two years, soil and growth conditions excellent, and stream flow good in the region.

Late spring rains would help the situation in many sections where prospects now are none too bright, it was reported.

Student Counsellors Set 2nd Conference

Oregon State College—A second annual conference for housemothers of student groups, counsellors and others in charge of student living organizations has been announced for this summer, the dates being June 23 to July 11.

The first such conference was held here, last summer and proved so popular that requests have been received from many states that it be repeated, says Mrs. Lorna Jesup, assistant dean of women, who will direct the conference. Already applications have been received from Nebraska, Oklahoma, Minnesota and Kansas in addition to Oregon.

Twenty-one members of the resident and visiting summer session staff will help with the instructional work of the conference, taking up such subjects as house maintenance, foods and nutrition as well as the problems of counseling and directing students.
