Freezing Eggs in Storage Lockers Found Practical

Homemakers who have access to frozen food lockers may store eggs successfully in these lockers during the heavy laying season for use when egg prices are higher, according to experiments carried out at the school of home economics at Oregon State college.
Commercial freezing of egg whites and yolks has been practiced successfully for many years, but little if any work has been done to adapt the process to small-scale use in the home. A successful procedure for such small-scale freezing, as well as experiments with the use of frozen eggs in cooking, has been carried out this winter by Gladys Hedlund, graduate assistant, under the supervision of Miss Agnes Kolshorn, associate professor of foods and nutrition.
Egg yolks, particularly, require treatment before putting in a frozen locker, else they will be gummy and difficult to use when removed from storage. Miss Hedlund's experiments showed that the addition of a small amount of honey to the eggs before freezing is the most effective treatment, although salt, sugar, or corn syrup may be used satisfactorily for this same purpose.
Eggs for freezing must be clean before breaking and need to be handled in a sanitary manner, as it is important to keep bacterial contamination to the lowest possible point. For that reason cracked eggs are not recommended for use in freezing, even though the eggs are broken before being stored.
Yolks and whites may be frozen together, although they are more commonly separated for convenience in later use. Miss Hedlund found that the use of small dishes for separating these is advisable as then an occasional bad egg will not spoil the large batch.
Whites can be placed immediately in waxed cartons or jars and need no treatment. Yolks are stirred thoroughly and one tablespoon of honey is added to every two cups of yolk. One tablespoon of sugar or one teaspoon of salt may be substituted for honey.

Eight Lamb Shows Set From May to July

A series of eight lamb shows in as many counties have been arranged by H. A. Lindgren, extension animal husbandman at Oregon State college, in cooperation with county agents and local agricultural leaders in the various counties.
Sherman and Polk counties will open this year's schedule with shows at Moro and Monmouth on May 10. Being the first in the Willamette valley, the Monmouth show this year is attracting particular interest, and will have a number of added features. Next on the schedule is the Lane county show at Junction City, May 17, followed by the Linn show at Scio May 24.
Marion county will hold its show at Turner June 7, and Coos county's will be at Myrtle Point June 24. The Curry county show follows at Gold Beach July 12, while the Baker county show will be at Baker July 18.

Lawn Weed Spray Method Described

Additional late information on the method of controlling lawn weeds with a Sinox-ammonium sulphate solution is contained in a revised circular of information, No. 240, written by L. E. Harris, assistant agronomist, and issued by the agricultural experiment station at Oregon State college.
Though experiments are still in progress to perfect the method further, excellent results are being had under the method as described in the new circular. This chemical treatment is most successful on old established lawns, although it may be used on new lawns if care and judgment are used in reducing the strength of the solutions so as to prevent injury to the grass seedlings.
The success of this method of lawn weed eradication depends in part on the condition of the lawn, says Harris. A lawn that has a dense grass cover will respond to the treatment better than one in which weeds predominate and the grass is extremely thin. The addition of the ammonium sulphate to Sinox, a chemical dyestuff, is to aid in killing the weeds and also fertilize the grass, giving it increased vigor.
A bulletin describing methods of use of this selective weed spray on grass and grain crops will be issued soon by the experiment station.

THE RECORD... Facts That Concern You No. 28 of a Series

A couple of bad eggs... but why blame the hen?

A bad egg does turn up once in a while... but that's not a sensible reason for destroying all the good eggs... or for taking it out on the hen.

Beer retailing in America is something like that. The vast majority of beer retail establishments are clean, law-abiding, wholesome places. And still there may be a few "bad egg" retailers who violate the law or permit anti-social conditions.

The brewing industry wants these undesirables eliminated entirely... to protect your right to drink good beer... and our right to make it.

And also to protect the many benefits brought by the beer industry to Oregon... such as the 13,238 jobs created... and beer's $11,541,550 annual payroll. Beer contributed $617,020.86 last year in taxes to help pay the cost of government in this state.

You can help us in our program of law enforcement, if you will, by (1) patronizing only the legal and reputable places that sell beer and (2) by reporting any abuses to the proper law enforcement authorities.
