Possibility of obtaining a federal building for Heppner to accommodate the several federal agencies serving this territory was told by W. S. Bennett who asserted that Heppner is being definitely considered for the location of the district Farm Security administration office. Bennett said that the regional FSA administrator in Portland was interested in seeing a federal building here, and that the same could be constructed with WPA labor providing site and materials were furnished by the city, the cost of materials to be repaid through rentals until liquidated, at which time the structure would revert to the federal government.

Hanson Hughes, who visited the nation's capital last year, added that he learned on his visit that Heppner might be eligible for obtaining an $80,000 federal building, built entirely by the government, providing postal receipts passed the $10,000 mark for three years. He gave as his opinion that rentals now being paid in Heppner by the federal government would amortize a considerable investment in a building.

The telephone talks their language, too

"Hi, Spike, bring your mitt!" . . . "Let's sleep out in Skinny's yard tonight!" — pressing affairs, handled man-to-man over the telephone. Later, those interests will branch out. Not Skinny and Spike down the street, but Chicago, Vancouver, New York, Buenos Aires.
The telephone "talks" all languages, serves countless needs. Bell System research is constantly finding ways to make it still more useful.
