Unlimited Emergency

A HITLER controlled world is out so far as the United States is concerned. That, in no unmistakable words, is what President Roosevelt told the world—and the Latin-American neighbors in particular—in his tensely awaited address Tuesday evening.

That the Axis' conquest in Europe has now reached world proportions and is threatening the very portals of the Americas, the president recognized in proclaiming an "unlimited emergency" in the United States, an act for which our people were prepared, but which brought forcibly home to the neighbors to the south a more critical situation than they had known to exist.

This emergency situation was said to affect the lives of every person in the country. It calls not only for redoubled efforts in the manufacture of war materials, but through the Office of Civilian Management, it places a duty upon everyone to do his bit in an enlarged program of defense. According to informed commentators, it puts the country on a war basis throughout, and calls for a greater unity of our people than has at any time before existed since the European conflict started.

What the president depicted as cause for the unlimited emergency is enlightening, and indicates not only a thorough understanding of world affairs by the chief executive, but the abilities of a commander-in-chief to organize for action. The response of liberty-loving people will be unanimous.

Declaring freedom of the seas as vital to the preservation of human liberty throughout the world, President Roosevelt stated that Axis actions were threatening such freedom, that even now they were maneuvering to establish island bases which would form bases for actual invasion of the western hemisphere.

Such moves are in fact "attacks" upon the Americas, and the president said in no uncertain terms that such attacks would be met and repelled, though they be a thousand miles from the mainland.

This paper has before said that there is no turning back in the course that has been followed, and we now stand ready to render every service to the end of fulfillment of the president's stated program. No one, not even the president, wants shooting, but with him we say democracy was established by winning a fight, and it can not now be saved by surrender.

Urgent Call Made For Navy Recruits

Thirty-five thousand additional men are urgently needed for the U. S. Navy by June, 30th, announces Lt. G. F. DeGrave, officer in charge of the Portland recruiting station. He continues:

This means that the Portland recruiting district's share based upon population would be approximately 750 to 800 recruits.

As you know, the navy is our first line of defense, and the ships of that navy, ships already built, ships building, and ships joining the fleet each day from our merchant marine, must be manned.

These crews must be trained prior to joining the ships of the fleet. The naval service has always offered to qualified young men tremendous advantages, but the navy today has more to offer than at any other time.

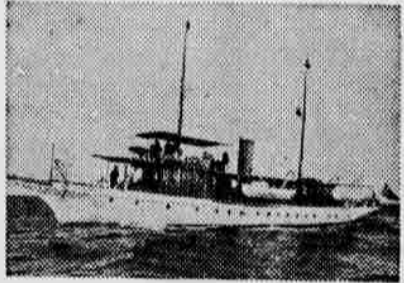

Selective service does not apply to the navy. The navy depends upon voluntary enlistments entirely. The term of enlistment in the regular navy is still six years for all men over 18 and under 31 years of age. For men between the ages of 17 and 19 the enlistment is for minority, or until the boy attains his twenty-first birthday.

EXAMINER HERE JUNE 5

A traveling examiner of operators and chauffeurs from the office of Earl Snell, secretary of state, will be in Heppner, Thursday, June 5, and will be on duty at the city hall between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. All those wishing permits or licenses to drive cars are asked to get in touch with the examiner during these hours.

We think the navy today has more to offer a young man than any employer in civil life, and we in the recruiting service appeal to everyone in bringing to eligible prospects information regarding service in the regular navy and the naval reserves.

Commencement at O. S. C. Is Stirring Event June 2

ROBERT A. THOMPSON RITES MARK END OF CAREER

Cleve Van Schoiack, in what was known as the Sanford Farming company, and C. W. McNamer. At time of passing, Mr. Thompson was considered to have one of the most ideal livestock operations in the county, starting on lower Rhea creek where lambing and early spring range conditions were favorable and extending almost continuously up the creek to what is known as the old Headquarters ranch in the timber to where the stock could be carried through to summer range.

As an operator in both farming and livestock, Mr. Thompson believed in adopting the latest methods and improving strains. On his Sanford canyon farm may be found one of the first trial plots for controlling soil erosion through contour cultivation, and he has always carried purebred cattle and sheep for herd improvement.

His interest in improved methods logically carried him into farm organization work and he was an active participant in work of both the Eastern Oregon Wheat league and Oregon Woolgrowers association. For several years, also, he held positions of trust in federal lending agencies, being vice president of Pendleton Production Credit association at time of passing.

A constant helpmate in his enterprises since November 24, 1909, has been Mrs. Thompson who he married as Sophrona B. Neel in Portland on that date. Together they built a home which was noted for its kindly hospitality and ready help wherever needed. To the union were born one son, Stephen, and two daughters, Roberta Ann (Bryant) and Kathryn, who with one stepdaughter, Reita Bibby, and one sister, Mrs. Maude Garner of Cheney, Wash., survive.

Mr. Thompson had been a member of both the Masonic and Elks lodges of Heppner for many years.

SATURDAY VOTE DETERMINES WHEAT MARKET FATE

government loans. Farmers who oversee may sell all they raise on their allotments just as cooperators, and they may store wheat raised outside their allotment, or may sell it and pay a penalty of about 48 or 49 cents a bushel. If they store their excess they are eligible for a loan on that part of their crop, but at a rate 60 percent of the regular rate. Wheat farmers of Oregon cannot afford to neglect the opportunity to vote, and I urge all farmers in Oregon to go to the polls and cast their votes in favor of the quota.

The referendum will be conducted in every wheat community in the nation. Resident wheat farmers will be in charge and each grower affected by the quota may vote by secret ballot.

The Altar Society of St. Patrick's church will hold a food sale at Clark's store on Saturday, May 31.
