English Native Brot Frank Wilkinson to United States in 1906

Frank Wilkinson, probably the largest individual sheep operator in Morrow county, came to the United States in 1906. He started his rise as a livestock operator of proportions before the last world war after having risen to foremanship of a large livestock concern near Fossil.

This bit of history was told the first of the week by Herbert Wright of The Dalles, a native Englishman, and the man who brought Mr. Wilkinson to the United States. Mr. Wright and son, Bill, employed at Kinzua, were here for several days visiting Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Wright, who recently opened the new Richfield service station.

Mr. Wright the elder had returned to England for a visit in 1905, as he recalled, and it was in 1906 on his return to the states, that Mr. Wilkinson came with him.

Mr. Wright also told of recently hearing from a sister residing in Coventry, which relieved him of the fear which accompanied word of the terrific bombing of that place by German airmen.

Mr. and Mrs. John Clouston and two daughters of Pendleton, and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Hayden and two children of Stanfield, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. S. P. Devin, mother of the two ladies.

SUGGESTIONS--

Tum-A-Lum is offering relief to hundreds of Heppner homeowners, from what promises to be one of the hottest summers ever known in this section of the country.

Because hot air is much lighter than cold air, the heated air in your home rises to the top of the building. Combined with the fact that the sun is constantly beating on the roof of your home, this results in terrific heat accumulating up there. Proper ventilation of your attic will do much toward cooling off the rest of the home. We will be glad to show you how inexpensive and how effective this method of cooling can be.

INSULATION

Here is an easy way to keep your house cool in summer and to reduce fuel costs in winter. You can install it yourself.
