By JUNE SMITH

Mrs. Ralph Thompson and Mrs. Harold Cohn returned home Monday evening from the two weeks trip given them as national officers of the Woman's Auxiliary to the National Woolgrowers by the Botary Worsted Mills. They report a wonderful trip, with the finest of everything offered by their hosts.

Leaving here the evening of May 24, they took the Portland Rose to Chicago, picking up Mrs. Emery Smith of Salt Lake City, who is vice president of the auxiliary, Green River, Wyoming. At Chicago they were joined by Mrs. Marsh Lea of Ft. Stockton, Texas, who represented the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers. In Chicago they were met by Mr. and Mrs. F. Simpson of Swift & Co., who showed them through the Swift plant and took them to luncheon at the Saddle and Sirloin club. They were then driven around Chicago, and left that evening on the Broadway Limited for New York.

Arriving there Wednesday morning, they were met by Mrs. Gertrude Hogan, educational director of the Botary Worsted Mills, and they were guests of Col. Charles S. H. Johnson, president of the organization. The four ladies were installed in the Tower rooms of the Waldorf Astoria hotel on the 39th floor, for their nine days' stay in New York City. While there, they were taken to the Cloisters, West Point, Central Park, Chinatown, the Bowery, and many other points of interest, including the Statue of Liberty. They dined at a number of famous spots, including the Rainbow Roof on the 65th floor of the Rockefeller Center building, Longchamps, the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf, the Hawaiian room at the Lexington hotel, and the St. Regis. They were taken to see Ethel Barrymore in "The Corn is Green," Vera Zorina in "Louisiana Purchase," "Life With Father," "It Happens on Ice," "Panama Hattie" and saw the dancing of the Rockets, a team dancing at the Radio Music hall. A day was spent in shopping in the famous stores of Broadway, such as Sterns, Saks and Lord, and Taylors.

At Passaic, N. J., they had a trip through the woolen mills, following the wool from the raw state to the finished product. Mrs. Cohn said that at present the looms were full of khaki, and that these mills are large users of domestic wools. The slogan in the east is "Buy American," according to Mrs. Cohn.

Following their New York sojourn, the four women were taken to Washington, D. C., where they stayed at the Raleigh hotel, in the Richard Crooks suite. While there they visited the Lincoln memorial, Arlington cemetery, Lee's mansion, Mt. Vernon, and Anapolis. Luncheon at the Hatchet Inn was interesting, and dinner at the L'escargot restaurant.

In Boston they were taken to Summer street, where all the wool houses are located, and Mr. Moor, president of the Colonial Wools, took them through. They called on Draper & Co., saw Paul Revere's house, Harvard and Bunker Hill. The fish pier was an interesting place.

"The most noticeable thing about Boston," said Mrs. Cohn, "was the extremely narrow, crooked streets, with everyone crossing every place." On their way home, they again stopped in Chicago, where they had breakfast at the Palmer House, and visited Marshall Fields & Co. On their way through Wyoming, they passed through a snow storm at Kemmerer.

They arrived home still in a whirl after seeing so many things and going so many places, all in grand style.
