1942 Range Plan Expected to Aid Small Operators

Proposed changes in the 1942 range conservation program recommended by delegates at the recent AAA range tour in Idaho are expected to have considerable application in Oregon, the state office at Corvallis reports.

Among the more important changes suggested by the delegates is revision of the present deferred grazing practice to include limited and rotational grazing under detailed plans to be approved by the county AAA committees. This change is expected to be particularly valuable in western Oregon, where improvement of hill land pastures and cut-over forest areas is highly important.

If the new proposals are approved and included in the national docket, they will permit wider participation by western Oregon livestock operators in the range program, state officials believe. Under the proposed provisions, smaller operators who do not find it practical to defer grazing completely could use limited and rotational grazing to improve their ranges and thus become eligible to earn payments for supplemental practices such as fencing.

Other recommendations were made, including some aimed specifically at giving assistance to smaller ranchers. The delegates advocated broadening the practice for eradication of undesirable plants, to make possible better local adaptation.

The conference pledged itself to "marshal the range agricultural resources of the country to best meet the needs of defense." As in the national AAA conference, ranchers were advised against speculative expansion and measures were advocated to avoid inflation. Maintenance of a balance between livestock and industrial prices was also urged.

Oregon's delegates to the five-day conference included Blaine Devers, state AAA range assistant; Lewis A. McClintock, Umatilla county rancher, and D. E. Richards, superintendent of the eastern Oregon branch experiment station at Union.

APPREHEND DRAFT EVADER

A young chap by the name of Whitehead was cooled off in the county bastille last week end after being picked up on a charge of soliciting a ride on a public highway. State police took the young fellow in the lower end of the county. When asked for his draft registration number, he failed to produce registration proof and the U. S. district attorney's office was notified. Federal officers picked him up the first of the week.

SHIP SHEEP TO WASHINGTON

G. R. Hyslop of Spokane was in the city Friday and Saturday receiving six carloads of yearling sheep which were loaded out of the local yards Saturday for the Hyslop Sheep company's operations in Washington. Harold Cohn, local agent, assisted with the shipment.

Miss Irene Beamer, daughter of Mrs. Clara Gertson, this week announced her engagement to Mr. William Anhorn of Central Point. The wedding is planned for July 27 at 8:45 in the evening at the local Church of Christ.

Choose Sheets by Test Of Quality, Purpose

Because quality in sheets varies so widely, the ordinary consumer can save good money by learning how to recognize the various grades, says Lucy R. Lane, extension specialist in clothing and textiles at Oregon State college.

"First of all," suggests Miss Lane, "decide what kind of service the sheet is going to get, so that you will know what type to buy. Is the sheet for everyday wear, one that will need to take the rough and tumble of the growing child's bed? Or do you want a finer, softer sheet—more of a luxury article? In general, sheets fall into five types—the light, medium, and heavy-weight muslins, the fine counts, and the percales. Each serves a definite purpose. A heavy muslin sheet, for example, is strong, sturdy, and durable; a percale sheet is better choice when appearance counts more and cost is not so important.

"After you have decided the type you want, study the sheet labels to compare thread count, weight, amount of sizing, breaking strength, length and width, and to learn whether the sheets are 'firsts,' 'seconds,' or 'run-of-the-mill,'" Miss Lane continued. "Within each type of sheet, highest quality usually goes with highest thread count, highest breaking strength and least sizing. 'Pure finish' refers to the sizing, and means there's less than 2 per cent."

Camp Fire Girls Plan Activities at Council

An important Camp Fire Girls council fire will be held Saturday, July 26, at 3 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Edwin Dick, Jr. A number of girls from both Camp Fire groups plan to take either the Trail Seeker or Wood Gatherer road at that time.

Of interest to the Sacajawea group will be the announcement of the girl selected to represent that group at Camp Namanu from August 3-9 as the guest of the Heppner Music Study club.

Immediately following the council fire a very important meeting of the Sacajawea group to make plans for their summer camp will be held. The girls are going to camp at the Turner-Nickerson cabin on Caldwell grade from August 3-8. At next Saturday's meeting each girl will cooperate by planning the food she is to bring.

Several non-Camp Fire girls have been asked to join Camp Fire in order to participate in the camp. New members in this group, which consists of sixth, seventh and eighth graders, are welcome until the limit of 20 members is reached. There are 13 members now. However, membership is not open to girls who are not residents of Heppner or some other place carrying on active Camp Fire work.

Non-Camp Fire girls may attend the local camp provided they are in the age group already stated, for a fee of $2.50 if their mothers make arrangements with Mrs. Dick before the council fire Saturday. This fee will be added to the Sacajawea treasury to help defray expenses for the camp.

The Nokomis group, consisting of older girls, will meet at 2 next Saturday.

Transportation to Portland is sought for the girl who is to attend Camp Namanu August 3-9. Anyone planning to drive to Portland from here on Saturday, August 2, or returning the following week end is asked to telephone Mrs. Dick at 845.
