P. P. & L. Institutes New Defense Plan

As a precautionary measure against possible sabotage, all employees of Pacific Power & Light company, whose duties take them to the company's substations or generating plants or to defense industries, now carry individual identification cards, according to K. A. House, local agent for the company.

Each of the specially processed cards carries a picture of the bearer and a photographic copy of his signature.

In line with a national program headed up by the federal power commission, power stations that were formerly open to public inspection are now closed to visitors. Utilities throughout the nation are cooperating in the defense move.

MAYOR SEES McNARY OFF

Mayor J. O. Turner was among those present at the Pendleton airport Saturday evening to greet Senator Charles L. McNary who was on a return flight to the national capital after a respite at his Fir Cone farm near Salem. Mayor Turner reported the senator as appearing very fit. Mr. Turner was at the airport particularly to meet his niece, Mrs. James Valentine, who was on the same plane from Portland with the senator, on her way home after undergoing treatment for several weeks at a Portland hospital.

Olive M. Kennedy Was Pioneer Daughter

Last rites for Olive May Kennedy, 65, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Howard, pioneers, were held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the Church of Christ, Martin B. Clerk officiating, with interment in Masonic cemetery. Mrs. Kennedy passed away Friday evening at Morrow General hospital, following a lingering illness.

Olive May Howard was a native of this section being born on upper Butter creek March 18, 1876. Her father was an early day sheriff and grocery store proprietor, and as a girl she attended the local schools. Both her parents were drowned in the Heppner flood of 1903.

She is survived by three sons, Lynn Hale of Long Creek, Loren Hale of Pendleton, and Vere Hale of Walla Walla, all of whom were with her at time of passing; also two sisters, Mrs. Cecil (Lizzie) Humphreys of Puyallup, Wash., and Ida Gray of California, and one brother, Wayne Howard.

ALASKA FOLK VISIT

Mrs. Raymond Huddleston (nee Jeanette Turner) and daughter Lorene of Valdez, Alaska, arrived last Thursday evening for a two months' visit at the home of Mrs. Huddleston's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Turner. They were met at Seattle by father Frank and sister, Jeanette, the latter having flown an airplane to meet the boat, which was two days late in arriving. The Huddlestons have resided in the Alaska city for several years where Mr. Huddleston has been employed with federal works projects as engineer, and Mrs. Huddleston has taken a prominent part in musical circles. Mrs. Huddleston hopes that Mr. Huddleston may be able to get a leave of absence later in the season and join them here for a stay until after Christmas.

FIFTH IN SHIPYARDS

Oregon ranks fifth as to the number of private shipyards in the U. S. handling naval vessel contracts, according to Lieut. (j.g.) Nard Jones, U. S. N. R., who just returned from Washington, D. C., where he attended a conference of navy public relations officers. California has 17 yards engaged in the building of ships for the navy, and New York is second with 14 yards thus engaged. There are 5 yards in Oregon with navy contracts, Jones stated.

Call Sounded for 12,000 New Workers

Order for placement of 12,000 workers in shipyards was received this week by the Oregon Employment service, announced Don Robbins, manager of the Pendleton office while in the city Tuesday. To fill this call new trainees are badly needed, and Morrow county men interested may take advantage of the free vocational school at Pendleton, Robbins said.

The vocational school offers courses in arc welding, machine tool, sheet metal, aviation sheet metal. The school operates 24 hours daily, and as soon as satisfactory tests are passed trainees are offered positions with defense industries.

Welders completing the course are started in positions paying the standard union scale of wages, Robbins said, while sheet metal workers start at a minimum of 62½ cents an hour. The employment service is the sole hiring agency for defense industries, and anyone who wishes employment in this line should register with the service, Robbins emphasized.

The Pendleton office is located at 201 S. E. Court Ave.

For the benefit of Morrow county farmers needing labor, Robbins said his office would assist in every way possible upon notification of needs.

The navy now has its ship contracts spread over 109 yards in 28 states, he said, whereas a year ago only 12 private yards were building naval vessels. The figures are for the fiscal year ending June 30.
