Revival Reaches Halfway Mark

Increasing audiences give evidence of the value of the meetings being held at the Church of Christ by Bro. G. B. Schmid. His portrayals of the Gospel songs in colored chalk have a most inspiring message in themselves. His message is the more powerful because his whole dependence is upon God. Only two weeks remain to hear him.

Messages Sunday are "The Way of Life," "The Last Will and Testament of John Brown." There is to be a baptismal service after the morning worship.

Next week will feature chart sermons on the following topics: Tuesday night, "Which Way Are You Traveling"; Wednesday, "Where Will You Spend Eternity"; Thursday, "How Does God Change the Heart"; Friday, "The History of the Church"; Saturday, "The Unpardonable Sin."

Inland Waterways Meeting Slated 30th

Walla Walla—With an outstanding array of visitors and speakers who have accepted invitations, the eighth annual meeting of the Inland Empire Waterways association October 30 will have as its theme, "How the Columbia-Snake River Waterway May be Utilized as an Adjunct to National Defense."

October 29 will be devoted to field inspection of river shipping facilities at Umatilla, Port Kelley, Attalia, Pasco and Kennewick. Plans will be arranged for an inspection of local facilities while those desiring to see full operations for handling wheat will be permitted to do so at Port Kelley.

Among speakers and visitors at the convention will be Col. Richard Park and Lt. Col. Cecil R. Moore of Portland, respectively division and district engineer, the corps of engineers; Dr. Paul J. Raver, Bonneville power administrator; Frank E. Landsburg, district director of the I. C. C. and virtually all members of the public utility commissions of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. Ed Davis of Olympia, director of the state department of conservation and development, will represent Gov. Arthur B. Langlie while R. H. Kipp, executive secretary of the Willamette River basin commission, will represent Gov. Charles Sprague of Oregon.

Oregon's utilities commission will be represented by Ormond R. Bean, commissioner, and John H. Carkin, superintendent of transportation, while Charles F. Schaefer, newly appointed supervisor of transportation for the Washington department of public service, will attend from that body. The entire public utilities commission of Idaho, headed by M. Reese Hattabaugh, its president, will attend as well as E. B. Berg, state director of reclamation, representing Gov. Chase A. Clark, Idaho.

Chairmen of convention committees already appointed include: President Charles Baker, Walla Walla, program; B. M. Huntington, Walla Walla, finance; Bert Johnson, Ione, resolutions, and A. L. Alford, Lewiston, nominations.
