Machinery Repair Drive Aids Defense

Corvallis—To help farmers meet shortages of new farm machinery in 1942, Chairman Robert B. Taylor of the Oregon USDA agricultural defense board today announced a statewide campaign for repair of existing farm machinery.

County USDA agricultural defense boards have been instructed to organize immediately and carry out farm machinery repair programs in every one of Oregon's 36 counties, Taylor said.

Farmers contacted in the current sign-up campaign for the 1942 farm defense program are being advised to check over old machinery and order needed parts at once, the chairman explained. Farmers who find that needed parts are not available are asked to notify their county defense board promptly.

Plans for carrying out the repair program will be made by state and county USDA defense boards early in November. The support and assistance of manufacturers, merchants, mechanics, blacksmiths and schools will be enlisted in the campaign.

"This is a defense job to which every farmer in the state can contribute by repair, better care, and more efficient use of the machinery he has on hand," the defense chairman declared.

Limited labor supplies will force farmers to rely more on machinery to accomplish the record production called for under the food-for-freedom program next year, Taylor pointed out. As shortages of steel and other metals will reduce new machinery manufacture, he advises farmers to "help their country and help themselves" by repairing old machinery now instead of trying to get unnecessary new machinery next year.

Food Research at OSC Interests Dr. Mitchell

Research studies in human nutrition being carried on in the school of home economics at Oregon State college drew the attention of Dr. Helen Mitchell, chief nutritionist in the civilian defense organization at Washington, D. C., on a recent visit to Corvallis.

She showed particular interest in a piece of apparatus just obtained, called an electronic photofluorometer, which is a new device for detecting the presence and amounts of vitamin B-1 in foods, and is now installed in the research laboratory operated by Dr. Margaret Fincke of the nutritional staff.

Dr. Mitchell praised the work of the Oregon nutrition defense committee and urged, among other things, the stressing of the use of iodized salt as a health measure.

Missionary Coming to Heppner Pentecostal Church

WITH THE CCC'S

CCC OFFERS TRAINING

Four hundred thirty-two enrollees of the Vancouver district are receiving special training in district and national defense schools which have been established in the camps of the district.

The schools offer training in the following: Radio, airplane sheet metal, sheet metal, auto mechanics, machine shop, shoe repair, photography, welding, carpentry, pattern making, forging, drafting, cooking and baking, clerical work, and heavy equipment operation and maintenance.

An average of thirty hours training is given each week. The average length of the school term is fifteen weeks.

Any deserving member of the district, after having spent three months in the CCC camp of his choice, may enroll in one of these schools.

In addition to the training offered by these special schools, each camp has its own educational program which is organized to meet the interests and needs of the members of the particular company. Each camp program includes the following: First aid, cooking and baking, auto mechanics, truck driving, citizenship, and academic subjects.

In the camp the library, reading room, recreation hall, and a well-rounded sports program offer ample recreational opportunities. Practically every camp in the district has a motion picture projector and has one or two shows each week.

Camp Heppner is located just east of the Morrow county rodeo grounds and is one-half mile from the city of Heppner.

The work projects of the Soil Conservation service at the Heppner camp offer exceptional opportunities for teaching and the care and operation of heavy equipment.

Young men interested in learning to operate a "cat," bulldozer, carry-all scraper, or truck will find the Heppner CCC camp an excellent place to get this training.

Any young man between the ages of 17 and 23½ years of age is eligible to enroll at any time and take advantage of the training opportunities offered by the CCC. Information regarding enrollment may be obtained at the state employment offices, county welfare office, or at any CCC camp.—George E. Walker, educational adviser.

Ernest Tunnel, enrollee operator of station WUOD of CCC Company 2945, Heppner, until the Vancouver Barracks district network was discontinued, has joined the Alaska Communications service which is a unit of the U. S. army. Tunnel will spend some time attending a special radio school in Seattle and will then be transferred to Alaska as a radio operator.

Dave Hardman, of Company 2945, enlisted in the U. S. navy and was given an honorable discharge from the CCC. Dave has been a member of the CCC for nearly two years and a member of this company for 12 months. While here he has worked as machine helper, truck driver, and "cat" operator. He completed 180 hours of training in national defense school in auto mechanics that was taught here this spring.

In line with the district educational policy of making the training opportunities of the district and national defense schools available to all CCC enrollees, three members of Company 2945 were transferred to receive training they desire.

John Pauli, assistant leader and second cook, was transferred to Camp Nehalem to attend the district school for cooks and bakers. Norman Street went to district headquarters to enroll in the shoe repair school. Melvin Stradford after three months of preliminary training has been enrolled in the auto mechanics school at the Sellwood shops of the U. S. department of agriculture in Portland.

FRANKLIN JOSEPH RIDINGS

Franklin Joseph Ridings, of 1595 Franklin boulevard, died at his home Nov. 13 at the age of 75 years.

He was born May 1, 1866 in Portland and spent his early life in Clackamas county. He was a student at the Willamette university. For over 25 years he was engaged in the mercantile business at Marquam, Ore., first in partnership with his father and later alone.

He was married Oct. 19, 1897 in Oregon City to Ann Haugh, who survives him. The family moved to Cottage Grove in 1913 and to Eugene in 1917.

He is survived by two daughters, Marie of Anchorage, Alaska, and Reta of Laramie, Wyo.; one son, Gordon, of New York City; five sisters and four brothers.

Funeral services were held from the Ekman funeral home in Silverton at 10 a. m. Saturday, Nov. 15. Branstetter-Simon chapel was in charge.

Food Stamp Plan Violator Fined and Imprisoned

A severe penalty in a food stamp violation case was meted out recently to a Mississippi grocer found trafficking in food stamps. Pleading guilty to charges of violating the Food Stamp Plan Regulations, James Newton Weir, owner of a grocery business at West Enterprise, Miss., was sentenced in Federal court to three years imprisonment and $1000 fine. Three runners employed by Weir were each given sentences of six months.

Investigators of the Surplus Marketing Administration, which operates the Department of Agriculture program under which food purchasing power of public assistance recipients is increased, uncovered the illegal activity over a period of six months.

Weir was providing relief clients with funds to purchase food stamps, receiving as his share half of the free blue stamps which the Government contributes. Criminal action was instituted against Weir under Section 90, Title 18 of the U. S. Criminal Code, which provides stringent penalties for the presentation of false claims to the government.

SMA announces it will seek similar action through Federal courts whenever investigations disclose fraud on the part of participants in the Food Stamp program.

Bob Kopp of Portland, and his sister, Mr. Oscar Schultz of Pendleton who had just returned from a visit in Kentucky, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Lawrence Monday.
