

Wild Life Federation Stresses Fisheries

The progress of science in the conservation and development of fishing resources will be stressed at the sixth annual conference of the Oregon Wildlife federation, to be held at Oregon State college December 1 and 2, according to William J. Smith, Portland, president of the federation.

One of the main visiting speakers will be Charles E. Jackson of Washington, D. C., assistant director in charge of fisheries research for the federal fish and wildlife service. Mr. Jackson, one of the nation's outstanding ichthyologists, will represent Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the federal fish and wildlife service, at the meeting.

Another specialist in this field who will attend is Paul R. Needham, associate aquatic biologist of the United States bureau of fisheries, who has been making a study of Oregon and California fishing streams. He made special studies of the streams of southwestern Oregon this past summer.

Representatives of 120 conservation and sportsmen's organizations will make up the official delegates at the conference, although the sessions are open to the general public. Conferences in the past have given rise to definite action on the part of Oregon's fish and game administrators, and by the legislature. President Smith points out.
